In itself that really isn't a crime, however: sounds an awful lot like a money laundering operation, if any evidence whatsoever is found of that you'll get investigated, but that in itself isn't really a crime.

1 year per person swindled (i.e 17 people swindled = 17 years in prison). If you swindled someone who later swindled more people then it also counts. Goes for around 10 layers.
