Like, as in going out of their way to get themselves DEAT'd by the mods when they could just, you know, log out and not log back in again? That term makes me think of going out of your way to deliberately make rulebreaking posts in order to end up getting deleted, but some of the examples I have seen look like mates making posts that are rather flagrantly rulebreaking to the point where it seems like they may as well be committing suicide by mod, but with no intentions to get deleted and the main reasoning behind making such posts is because they're penises.

Yeah, and Googles default is atrocious as well, and there are plenty of generic sites that don't blind you.

Now I can't stand white backgrounds because of my own eyesight, but I still don't get how people who can see well tolerate it.

Also I just gotta add that this site's dark theme is genuinely unreadable for me. I'm not exaggerating or anything like that either, the color they use for the background and then the color they use for the text on it results in the text colors just blending together for me and ugh.

Awful.

It used to be worse, too. On the NS stats department, I have said before that before I made that feedback, it used to be dark text on dark theme, the former being carried over from light theme.

Yeah, dark green on black doesn't exactly mix that well, among a few other things. I wouldn't call that neon green, it's not like those old computer terminals where it's pure green. I'm also told that out of all the dark themes across sites and apps, NS' one was quite awful.

(Also wow I can't believe we are reaching 500 pages...)
