On the topic of totally-legitimate-and-not-bs-cliches not giving my factbooks tons of upvotes. smrh. i deserve more funny green number for the work I put in.

Debatable, source? 🤖

The Avant-Gardist State of Patagonia ~~~ Gauchos and Mapuches, orgies and parties, avant-garde art, futurism, syndicalism, the New Man, general strikes, the glorification of violence, spiritual nationalism, esoteric occultism, CIA spooks, Spartanian homosexuality, public sodomy, and more

Triomphe du Surréalisme (1968)

- There are many things said about Patagonia but few actually know what goes on behind the Andes mountains. Tales of human depravation and man's inner darkest self run wild. A place where avant-garde culture flourish and the artist don't fear the censor. Where all live bold and free under the gaze of the Patron. Yet all dreams will come to an end soon...
- Not expecting an essay. Just a couple of sentences that shows that you know my work well enough

Cliche: Characters sitting in chairs. My gigachad nation despises "chairs" as bourgeoisie decadence and performs all tasks while Jojo-posing.

Seconded. I never stop being amused at the thought of every time someone, whether figures in IC or other characters in F7 (especially the pompous type) meets my leader, they'll be forced to awkwardly sit on the floor.

Tbh many of it comes from the inability to handle emotions, especially when you're on the receiving end of an insult. Idk, personally I always held this principle that the best response to an insult is to agree and double it out of normal logic. If someone calls me stupid, the best course of action would be to point out how catastrophically idiotic I actually am.

Not really a cliché buuut... trope? Unexpected ways to get the whole world bombed... in Cold War.

A computer chip that costs 50 cents was defective and started displaying "220 incoming missiles".

June 3, 1980

This incident is probably the most well-known, and occurred at the same installation as the previous one. At 2.26am EDT, Secretary of Defense Brzezinski was alerted that early warning systems indicated two hundred-and-twenty nuclear missiles were inbound to the U.S. A short time later this figure was increased to two thousand, two hundred. It had begun with a detection of just two SLBM launches, ending with an indicated all-out ICBM attack from the Soviet Union. Once again bombers took off, the Pacific Command Airborne Command Post was launched and the Minuteman ICBMs were warned up.

The alert was rescinded because again, radar readings from across the country did not agree with what was being displayed at NORAD. It took three days to isolate the problem, because it was that long before it occurred again. The fault was traced to a computer chip (which several articles mention cost 46¢, like I care), which was failing randomly. The fault was replacing readouts of incoming missiles that were usually zero with the number two.

Now you can imagine fictional scenarios like this.

Here's a cliché that I have only seen once but will bitch about it anyways (at least I am honest): The usage of "Realpolitik" or "Pragmatism" to describe governments that are just "generic authoritarian nationalists" with no real sense of irony. Because clearly, only supporting other authoritarian dictators (and not playing both sides like Yugoslavia) is "Realpolitik" and giving the egotistical murderer total control of the nation is the pragmatic option.
