The most popular tourist attraction in their nation is also their largest and it is referred to as 'The Museum of the World'. It has a total width of 850 meters and height of 95 meters. It is made up of seven sections, which are stated below:

- Pre-history,
- Early days of Humanity
- The Age of Empires
- The Dark Era
- The Innovation Period
- The Modern World

Among these sections exists smaller sub-sections of events within each time period.

"The Futurists, on the other hand, believe in a clean break with the styles from Kronova's past. They prefer idealized depictions of everyday life, as realistic as can be. Rather than the senses of historic nostalgia or mysticism often conveyed by Traditionalist works, Futurists attempt to create themes of optimism and discovery instead. Futurists as a school place functionality above all else, reflected in their works. A piece cannot merely be beautiful, it must also glorify the ideals of the Republic. Futurism tends to be more popular in the southern urban areas of Kronova."

Also, "From My Window" by Marina Fomekov is gorgeous .

What's really interesting, to me at least, is that they like to upset other nations by recognizing nations that are otherwise seen as illegitimate. I imagine that it may come to bite them hard in the rear end sometime soon or prove to be quite beneficial for their nation.

When it comes to culture, the Hathians are culture of honour and unity. They are united under nationalism, where class is put aside. So much so, that the rich and poor mile with each other, and getting offended by the same things (e.g putting your feet on the table).
