Just to prove that I'm a terrible person and that you're 100% right to recognise that, I'll admit I find the whole situation with people accusing me funny.

Honestly as weird as your shtick is, it's at least less annoying than that one dude who would constantly post about his bizarre monetary ideology that he legit wanted implemented on this actual website.

On the topic of RP length, there are both sides to it, though I don't necessarily side with either one heavily - just a matter of whether or not you are doing it for fun, and that is all that matters. ♥

One hand, I can see for the RP length having a minimum count. Maybe your intro post establishes a lot of settings, or it was supposed to be that one very big factbook post of sort - the one where you are supposed to write the setting instead of on the factbooks or dispatches. Interesting choices, but nonetheless, favorable. It also drives out the "I launch a thousand tanks at your placement" without going into detail as to why.

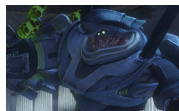

On the opposite end, I don't really like forcing my style on people who don't want it. Even on F7 you will see that I only railed against those that didn't put effort in, not length. I don't exactly care as much if it is an one-liner, but in my opinion, you better make it count and at least read something that I have written instead of the surface-level stuff. This goes the same with RP length. There is a reason why one of the RPs I am in has a limit of 1250 words every cut-off; not at least, maximum word count, because goodness knows sometimes we hit novel-levels of content.

As for the honest-to-goodness 50,000-word RP, I will have to assume that's a hyperbole because holy shoot, that's a lot of words. Even one of the most evaluate RPs I have participated (no word limit, no upper or lower) reached 72,000 words, and that's 41 parts over the course of 4 months.

Thanks for attending my F7 Talk. ♥

When I started I made terrible oneliner RP posts, but over time I came to see RP as more of a story than a text based strategy game, which is why I prefer writing longer, in depth posts involving characters and a good amount of emotional writing if I will. Settings and all are, of course, quite important, so I try to write a paragraph or two in the opening to establish it. I also enjoy working on collaborative posts with other writers

At the end of the day, as cliched (hehe) as it sounds, I think we can all go back to the ol' reliable "Quality over Quantity", or "Balance of Quality over Quantity".

I also do small-line posts in F7, I am not here to judge. I just do longer ones because I love how they look on my screen, that's a me thing. So when I usually said "Dude, I would appreciate it if you read more into my stuff," I am not expecting huge-ass school homework levels of literature analysis; I just want that guy to write 1-2 lines on what they took away other than just glancing through Valentine Z's mottos, stats, etc. ^^

EDIT: I regret posting now.

Anyone can improve from one line posts if they want to. Unfortunately I feel like a lot of the one line posters aren't seeing as many effortposters these days and thinking "hey they seem like they're having fun and not getting angry with each other" because effort posts are drowning in the ocean of one line text based EU4 meets Tom Clancy.

Funny story: I used to believe a bit in this theory of "The magnetic poles will shift and while we won't have super huge earthquakes, the poles will screw up ALL the electronics". That was back in 2012.

I (for better or worse) didn't really participate in a lot of wars. I mean, with the stuff like The Sixty, you would think I am set off to do some godmodding or crazy-ass levels of destruction. But I never did, only playing scenarios off in my head, or writing personal stories. ^^

And like you said, it indeed is important to get involved off-site (Discord is primarily popular, though I know it's not everyone's cup of tea), and truth be told, some ideas took off thanks to suggestions from both F7, and from Discord. ♥

Most RP groups (the threads that say X only) generally have discords, you can TG members for server invites if you're interested usually, and many discord server invites are in people's sigs or regional RMBs even

Oh nah, I'm aware of II being more than wars, or short-lived wars at that.

You know, I still don't fully get why NS and II are separate boards. I understand why F&NI, GE&T, and NS Sports are separate boards, but it feels like an NS RP that doesn't fit into any of those boards could go into either NS or II.

they're different but unfortunately people like to cross over RPs when they really shouldn't. NS is usually used for things like non-military character RPs with parties and stuff. II is for military RPs.

It isn't necessarily wars, just more confrontational interactions between countries, NS is for more diplomatically-minded or casual stuff ig

THE PEOPLE * ETERNAL

" We will not bow to your dictation. We are free. We bled to be free. Who are you to tell us what we may and may not do? We stopped being your slaves an era ago. "

South Reinkalistan is a massive, ecologically-diverse nation notable for its roving student militias and widespread hatred for the elderly. In the midst of a room-temperature cultural revolution that's lost its momentum, the Party carefully plans its next move. As the brittle bones of fragile empires begin to crack beneath their own weight, history's symphony reaches crescendo pitch. The future is all but certain.
