Rapture City

- In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. Yet the people would be in for a surprise as their virtual overlord have died many years ago as the oppression continues under his name...
- Not an 1-1 exact replica of Bioshock lore and Rapture City. Only the city's atmosphere and setting is maintained.

Second, do they avoid hurting the wild cats both by ignorance or willingly- trashing the environment, cutting the trees and stamping the ground, etc. Anyways, enough about it, now let's get to their leader capabilities - it seems that he was promoted to his general status because he charged into enemy without any consideration. Hey, courage is admirable, but at some point it becomes suicidal, and I would also want to see his tactician abilities in action - muscles aren't enough to win a war, after all. Pity that he retired - he would have made a good killer for whatever clan he was serving. And, I have noticed, that he keeps talking about this thing, which I still find hard to pronounce - it is invisible, yet very lethal in high amounts. And it sounds... terrifying. I also don't understand half the specifics of your disaster, but you seem to have save the entire twoleg kind from annihilation - your StarClan (gods) would be proud about such a hero."

"Her aggressive expansion, exile of cats not affiliated with clans, forced assimilation and subjugation, and opposition to traditional beliefs such as the warrior code that is held in high regard by other cats, makes me think of her as some cat that is driven by a personal ambition of war and conquest, rather than creating a legacy of peace and unity. Honestly I don't think she is working for the greater good of her subjects, I simply see her as a warmongering cat. She applies the traditional beliefs where they serve her, but she breaks the warrior code where it doesn't benefit her"

Still... because of all Arslan's impressive feats, such as making shariah law, that actually respects women, I am more than willing to overlook this issue, after all... I believe they will grow more lenient on premarital affairs over time. He claims, that strictly enforced morality is something that "prevents sword from rusting", but I admit, I have some doubts about that.

I mean, from my perspective it's really hard to understand, how a country can decay from premarital sex, when I rule a prosperous haven of sin. Perhaps, our cultures are very different then, and we should arrange a meeting, where we could exchange and learn from each other. So we could understand each other better. I'll finally learn to do this sword dance and add some of its elements into my repertoire of fighting styles. Yes, it will be useful in CQB with several opponents."-Shawn Bjornson

I'm certainly not foolish enough to take her stated pursuit of a utopia at face value, for the simple reason that a perfect utopia is functionally unattainable within the confines of individual, sentient thought. She is either an idealistic fool, an executor of some ulterior motive... or possessive of some rather unorthodox views as to what a utopia actually entails. I've no personal umbrage with her, of course - she treads her path, and I mine. And I've no doubt that my stance is reciprocated in the following - should she stand in the face of my ambition, I won't hesitate to crush each and every one of her constituent vermin to less than dust. It is not a threat - merely an assertion of possibility."

"Well, thanks to the coronavirus, the shelves have been stripped like clothes in a fanservice episode, but I was luckily able to get a $10 can of bug spray for anyone to pick up and spray her down with. Hopefully it'll suffice for this obviously power-hungry ragdoll if she gets all zealous because I don't bow down to her hive ass, because why waste resources when you can just call an exterminator? But besides that, I'm not sure I like her. Way too controlling, and way too convinced she actually matters."

"Thanks to the incessant threats you have been making, we shall not be meeting in person from this point onward. Not that this really bothers us in the slightest, as you are a most unpleasant, uncouth, vulgar, immature, and repulsive being. This matters little, we have the manpower to do as it is a proper leader does - delegate such tasks. We find in such situations, a skilled sniper is an effective means to silence a petulant child."
