Depends. If Scientology is exactly as it is in the real world, the organization would be heavily investigated for its shadier activities, but being a member wouldn't be illegal on its own. However, if they summon devils? All bets are off. Devil theurgy, as it's referred to in this setting, is dangerous to both the practitioner and everyone around them, and as such is illegal in most countries. In Red Lake in particular, summoning devils can carry either a sentence of life imprisonment or intensive therapy, depending on the context in which it was performed. Devil theurgists typically don't do well in prison.

Murder with an expressly bigoted intention behind it (i. e. a hate crime)?

Not illegal, just wierd. If said meat was appropriately marked and produced you can even sell it! No, this does not mean that one can catch dogs on the street and sell them- the FDA can and will use lethal force when needed.

Not a crime, unless it is unclear that it is an assisted suicide with consent of the dying. In practice, this means that Euthanasia is fine, but shooting someone who wants to be shot usually results in murder charges being pressed and dismissed.

Possession of LSDs

I'd say this nation is about 85-90% representative to my beliefs. About the only difference between my nation and beliefs is that free markets are effective in a select few situations, and the compulsory organ harvesting is kind of screwed up

The nation's current administration has severely escalated the War on Drugs. Expect a serious sentence if you're using it, and if you are the dealer, death penalty, as you'd be charged with the murder of those affected.

Well, provided you actually survive the guards attempt to stop you (which would involve their rifles), and the subsequent deployment of the military police (and their armored units) and are not already fit to be buried in a bucket, that'd be insurrection of the first degree and thus punishable by beheading.

Depends where the toilet was, was anyone injured.

If someone was injured it depends on severity.

A toilet being blown up in the middle of no where is not a crime, a toilet blowing up in the middle of a crowded plaza, and well thats gonna have to be a crime.

For numbers sake I'll say 1 month - 30 years.

Highest punishment one could get is Death Penalty which is only applicable in cases of deliberate killing of a person resulting in no applicability of blood money and certain religious crimes.

Second highest punishment is aggravated amputation and lifetime imprisonment without parole which is only applicable for crimes of terrorism, high treason, high level of bigotry or racism.

Otherwise, if someone bodily harms one without reason of defense, then the exact harm must be judicially inflicted.

(Aggravated amputation stands for amputation of both limbs, hands and eyes.)

Public health endangerment- treated the same way as any other one with armed FDA/EPA police force at first sending polite letters to stop such shameful actions and fines, followed by an armed unit arriving a couple of days later forcefully dismantling whatever the hell is causing the pollution, in some cases killing polluters in the process.
