I don't think Mirrodonia would really like Devin Townsend.

Anyway, still listening to the same song because I'm too lazy to start up another YouTube video right now.

Everyone must listen to Dev. It is the way of humanity.

Also, to every poster in this thread, instead of going through YouTube videos, it's much faster to use the handy little website Grooveshark. That's what I use for listening to music. It's incredibly helpful and easy to use.

Metal songs about sex are one of the best things.

I usually can't stand songs about sex, usually because they are just generic and sound terrible and aren't even done in a good way. But 2 songs by Hera (Which is like folk) sound like they are about sex, and I like both because I feel like it is lyrically more interesting and sung more interesting then some of this godawful songs I've heard about sex. I feel like she is very much about the lyrics and her vocal style, anyway. Musics good, but the lyrics and vocals are the standout part for her because she sings about some very interesting things, like a love song about chocolate and her guitar, or throwing out really strange metaphors related to certain subjects she's singing about.
