"Protettore Generale d'Italia? That is indeed a title I never heard of... Oh, so it is una Italia di un universo parallelo? Perfetto, for I would not like to deal with fascisti such as himself. I can congratulate him on his servizio in la Forza Armata Italiana, but that's where il mio rispetto toward him ends. Honestly, the thing that stands out the most about him is just how contrarian he's trying to be - not for him are the trappings of a typical despot. None of that communism, fascism... hell, he's even turned away from nazbol, which is what these edgelords typically dip into if they don't want to follow the mainstream. No information on how he actually rules, but given the rest of this dossier I can safely assume that his policies follow the usual gamut of military strongman-strutting, civil suppression and social conservatism. Could be wrong, but at this point I don't really care, since I have no input on information I can't actually see."

"Gotta be honest with you here - this guy just oozes "gangster" for some reason. Which is odd, because he so very clearly isn't one. Am I getting hints of metanarrative shenanigans here? Might be worth looking into. That aside, he's alright. Respectable background, respectable policy-making. Weirdly enough, he seems to actually care about his country and its people, without going into the whole "deutschland über alles" thing. Or "stanier über alles", in this case. I kinda like him! On The Captain:

A subordinate of the jumped-up child-empress? Well now. A soldier, caught up in the senseless warmongering wrought by his superiors, and yet staunch in his defense of his friends and allies... commendable, to a degree. I can honestly praise his selfless conduct and willingness to place others above his own wellbeing, though I do caution him on the blind adherence to orders. No matter how one loves their nation, rationalism should take precedence above all else. I cannot judge him as a leader, but I can certainly commend him as a soldier. And as a person - it saddens me that so many officers, allegiance and nation notwithstanding, never seem to make the connection between the two.

On The Marshal:

Another soldier. This one at the helm of the nation she once served - a respectable rise. Her care for her people does show, but... it is misplaced, in a way. I will not badmouth her for dictatorial governance, for that would be hypocritical in the extreme. But to truly care for one's people means to offer them control of their own lives. Choices in their expression of values, their lifestyle. A drive to maintain traditionalism tends to work at cross-purposes with true care for the peoples' needs, going more in favour of establishing a set of values and social order that ultimately has no meaning - perhaps she has yet to realize this. Military strengthening is another respectable quality... marred, unfortunately, like the first. War glorification is most decidedly not the hallmark of a caring ruler. A nation should be prepared for war, yes, but to actively seek it is the height of folly. In short, my thoughts of the Marshal err towards the positive, though I implore her to consider the ramifications of certain stances she has deemed to assume. To restrict is to oppress, and oppression is naturally inimical to a supposed care for one's people.

A subordinate of the jumped-up child-empress? Well now. A soldier, caught up in the senseless warmongering wrought by his superiors, and yet staunch in his defense of his friends and allies... commendable, to a degree. I can honestly praise his selfless conduct and willingness to place others above his own wellbeing, though I do caution him on the blind adherence to orders. No matter how one loves their nation, rationalism should take precedence above all else. I cannot judge him as a leader, but I can certainly commend him as a soldier. And as a person - it saddens me that so many officers, allegiance and nation notwithstanding, never seem to make the connection between the two.

I'll have to agree with TNASE here - this isn't a war thread. If you want to make a war RP, feel free to TG me. Preferably after actually taking the time to read a military factbook or two, and realizing why landing any of your marines on the Islands proper would be functionally impossible.

/stillme, because this is getting ridiculous.

Dictator-backed dedication to absolute civil freedoms, ultrabureaucratic pseudo-socialism and heavily-armed neutrality.

Fueled by PMT*/FanT nanopunk schizotech, eldritch red tape and snazzy neo-cold war aesthetics on a broken continent.

Factbooks are currently in the middle of a Big™ Rewrite™, almost everything's out of date and ugly. Don't read them.
