If the squatters were associated with Helios Corporation, the criminal gets a life imprisonment. Otherwise, no legal troubles.

As long as it the victim was not associated with Helios Corporation, no punishment. If yes, straight to jail for 7 years.

It depends on how much you destroy. Let's say you destroy a street light. Well that is at least 600 USD fine for destruction of public propriety, plus 340 USD for disturbing the populace just because I feel like adding this, plus 6 months in jail or 1 year house arrest.

Considered a valid method of political protest, so not punishable - however may be referred to local gun club for retraining, as no targets hit indicates poor marksmanship.

not a crime. Victor's justice. Karl will just come pardon them.

Conducting a psychological lobotomy on a group of 12 unwilling subjects, the process goes as such: Tying a person to a lamp/fencepost, taping their eyelids open, and setting up an area of speakers, all wired to a 24 inch screen with enhanced brightness and blasting hood irony and similar overstimulating loud content for 15 days without end, all the while administering constant doses of a morphine-cocaine-methamphetamine saline solution directly through blood and keeping them alive and ultimately frying their frontal lobe, causing irreversible brain damage.

According to the Compilation of Governor's Decrees, this falls under unlawful torture and attempt to murder (if the subjects aren't already dead yet) and is punishable by 10 to 20 years in jail

If it results in the death, then it will be a death sentence
