"That asshole queen? She may be an eldritch abomination of pure evil and such, yeah. But her forces gonna fail miserably, cuz they gonna be at eachother's throats as soon as their direct leader dies. Or even without that. Beings, who are that vile are quite exploitable and can be easily manipulated into fightin' eachother. Up until her lil' hell collapses on itself. So if she ever comes to us, she better beware, cuz we got guns, bullets and resolve, and gonna end this menace! As for her pretty skull... it would look nice on a table. Or as a hood ornament. Oh, and her fancy jewelry can be pawned for lots of booze. I don't know, who she both exists and not exists, but if she ever plans to screw with us, this Schrodinger's lady better be in a state of non-existence. Unless she thinks, that she looks better as a trophy on a wall.

When there was oppression in our lands, there was Axanerva. But then she screwed up a big time. First, when we revolted, and then again, when we adopted our code of honor. Now, shall we raid some slavers or maybe some cruel criminal syndicate? The answer is yes. Just to screw up some more of her influence." -Overboss Liam Navarro

Imara, The umbral goddess

I haven't interacted with Liam yet. So I'm not so sure if he is a friend or foe.

But while I do not know of him sky reavers has interacted with umbral Lowblood on a few instances. Mostly before I could come into the lighted realm, meaning I had to watch through Vyke's eyes. Really boring, I know.

Liam seems like an interesting soul. Much like his people he seems to indulge in the consumption of drugs and alcohol, I could never understand why, my kind doesn't get effected by such things.

He is vary in tune with his people, this would be obvious as his lands stand by the freedoms of the lesser sound alright. I think he's lively company.

I'll have to let our paths cross a few more times before I can truly think of him in a positive of negative light.

Surprised this nation is still intact, so are we.

"I don't seem to know many world leaders that have as impressive powers and abilities as Imara, the 'umbral goddess'. Imara seems to be quite the benevolent leader and to make sure the people of Umbral LowBlood lead good lives is what a leader should do, therefore this is great. However, as an individual, she can be even more interesting. Her combat capabilities seem to be at an extremely high level, given her red lighting and shade stepping, which is quite impressive and are stuff only I could dream of. I suppose it's because she's an Akira, which seems to would be quite an interesting species given its regeneration abilities and its other powers.

Overall, Imara seems to be one of the most interesting individuals yet, given the abilities that she has and her role as a leader. For that, I commend her."

"He sounds like an interesting person, but more of a cult leader. He seriously has some true values on politics but wrong odd parts merged with religion. These two combinations usually form fundamentalism or dangerous ideologies, such as what has occurred with many groups in our own nation such as PAVLRT. However, it is hoped they don't become a danger to our business in the future.

"Ah, dear Balmothere. I've been waiting for this with both the patience and excitement befitting of one as timeless as I. Now that the hour has arrived I find myself overwhelmed with jubilation. My dear Balmothere... your scathing attack on my very being has been burnt into my mind since I first had the pleasure of hearing it. Fret not if you ever feel misunderstood, for I at least can appreciate your sense of humor. That is to say for all your intellect and wisdom you never thought to think outside the box but instead chose to believe all you had read as if it were the truth. That is good humor! My dear Balmothere, surely you must know that one such as I cannot possibly be driven by whimsical desire? Surely I cannot act so aimlessly as to be erratic and without reason? Surely you must understand that only a fool would reveal their intentions to their enemies and thereby allowing them to strategize against these plots through whatever means they determine necessary? Or did you truly, honestly believe that a being such as I can be so random? No, my dear, Balmothere. I assure you that everything I do has reason, everything I say has purpose, everything I pursue has intention behind it. But why would I tell you what those things are? My goals? My aspirations? My motivations? Why would I - why should I - reveal these things to you or anyone else for that matter? To be unknowable is to be unpredictable, and that is an advantage that no one in a position of authority should ever bequeath. It would benefit you more than me; and that I can't allow. No, I think I'll be keeping my secrets dear Balmothere to leave you and everyone else guessing. It's more fun that way. But I will tell you this much: you entertain me. If you should ever find yourself traversing dimensions, by all means, feel free to visit me. I'll make sure you're welcomed as an honored guest should be."

I do not know how she manages to make a spiritual battle physical, nor am I sure how she keeps a populace stable with her proclivities towards evil, but she manages to reign terror upon those she deems weak enough to take. However dangerous, she is ultimately something that can be overcome. At least our Great Enemy was trying to bring others down with him after his rebellion from the Great Almighty. At least the serpent enticed us to our own deaths. This demonic queen seems to be nothing but the worst of humanity made manifest, all vice and no virtue, all blood and cruelty with no subtlety whatsoever. We have already won the spiritual battle against her kind, and I doubt Theos would not give us the strength to repel an invasion from her. She is nothing but a weaker force against the servants of a higher power, and whether it comes from us or from Theos himself, we will have victory against her in the end. All tyrants shall fall, and she is no exception."

Natalie Liang, Director of the UNEEU

Greetings Sabre. I see that now I have to give my opinion on an American president. A communist American president. A bit strange, but anything is possible in the multiverse. Besides, we've had our own strange presidents the last years. Like Jeb Bush, who once ordered a nuclear strike on the Estran Empire during their invasion of Earth.

So you came from a Polish-American background. Later in your life, you joined the United States Airforce and flew various planes. You eventually chose to fly a bomber plane and got sent to... Vietnam. Oh no. At least you weren't part of the troops on the ground. As a bomber, you adopted a doctrine of total military annihilation. You sound a bit like the guy currently leading the UNC. Lets hope that you are not as crazy as him, but too be fair, my hopes aren't very high. After a long time without bombing anything, you left the air force, learned programming and then decided to become president. If you ask me, I would rather not have someone who likes to bomb things as president.

You joined the CPUSA, who is apparently pretty popular in your universe, and tried to radicalize the youth, which to me sounds a bit like what my mother said about how the cultural revolution was like. Luckily you don't seem like someone who intentionally wants to burn the country down. You expected the election to be silent but then 9/11 still happened. Even in a world where the entire world has been drastically changed like this, the September 11 attacks still happened. You know what they say, the more things change, the more they stay the same.

In 2008, you became president of America. In our world, Obama became president that year, you might know him. As president, you did some good things like expand anti-tax evasion laws and target corporations doing bad things. You also did some less savory things. In 2010, your presidency took a more hardliner turn, and you did all the same thing Bush did, but worse. You know... George W Bush. The person you ran against in your election. Didn't you call the PATRIOT act seditious and traitorous to the Union. I'm starting to think that you are a hypocrite. Probably not surprising considering your obsession with bombing stuff. But at least you are sane enough to step down when you realized that you really damaged your popularity with your actions. You also decided to help Jimmy Carter build houses for poor people.

So what can we all learn from this. Not everyone is cut out for leadership. While as president you were incompetent, unrestrained, a bit of a psychopath, etc. I still believe that you have your heart at the right place. But you would do more good to the people if you try to help them on a more personal level, like what you are doing right now with the Sabre-Carter foundation. While your life was a bumpy ride, I believe that you are now in a good place.

Its 2027, almost twenty years ago, a storage-facility with mysterious machines was found on the moon. These machines seemed to have the ability to open portals to other dimensions. In response to this, the United Nations created the UNEEU, or United Nations Extra-Universal Exploration Unit to see what the multiverse has for them, exposing Earth to many opportunities and dangers.

"...Life has not been fair to Yunru. But, of course it hasn't; when has the world ever been fair?

"...The girl is scarcely 24-years-old. What was I doing when I was 24? Flailing my way into graduate school? And here Yunru is, leading a semi-nation whose very survival depends on the idea that they might someday defeat a terrible evil seeking to conquer the entire world, by land and by brain. I understand why Anatoly begs Yunru to relax, and I agree with him—but I sympathize with Yunru. What if a moment's rest is all the lapse it takes to fall irrecoverably behind in the inevitable clash with Yuri and his Epsilon Army? How can Yunru ever sleep easy knowing that all of Foehn looks to her for leadership—and that to lead Foehn implies surviving the Epsilon Army—and that to survive Epsilon implies defeating them and Yuri? One can hardly blame Yunru for falling mentally ill under such terrible pressure."

"...And despite all that, Yunru apparently still yearns to someday 'forget all of this even happened in the first place, and just live the rest of our days quietly.' My circumstances are far more charmed, yet I hope it is alright to say I know... something, of what Yunru means. When I came out as a transwoman in university, I had to become an advocate. I had to speak up for and exert myself, or else the way the world was would threaten to squeeze me out of the picture. But I never wanted to do such things. I never wanted to be involved in negotiations for my rights, or to get into politics to make a difference, or to become ambassador-at-large. I have only done what seemed to be necessary, and I have answered the call to office when asked. But my dream is not to lead. I would much rather live a very quiet, ordinary life, not bothering anyone, just having some peace.

"...Hah. Of course, who am I to speak. Compared to Yunru, I already lead a quiet, ordinary life. Who am I to compare myself to her? On a weekend, I can recline and rest. I can read a book or watch a movie. But Yunru, she runs herself ragged everyday, believing herself to be a cog that must whirl every moment of the day in order to keep the machine alive. And she seems to not have much else to live for. Anatoly has remained her companion, but does she have any other friendships or camaraderie? It sounds as if all that was spoiled when Yunru first rose to lead the Paramilitary. To think that when she buckled down and did the hard work no one else wanted, her comrades rewarded her with cold shoulders and cheap jabs. Brushing off her colleagues was perhaps a bit cold, but to heap that back on her as soon as she had a moment's rest? That is cold in turn.

"I suppose some of the Militants might take issue with my sympathies. To them, Yunru might seem less like a girl under pressure and more like a tyrant, erratically enforcing and relaxing and then reinforcing strictures about dissent, speech, hierarchy, and more. Perhaps that is the Paramilitary's greatest tragedy. In trying to resist Yuri and his Epsilon Army, an enemy whose trademark attack is to conquer your mind and force you to obey—in trying to resist that, the Paramilitary has resorted to more... conventional forms of force in the effort to create a complicity of its own, opposing Yuri, yes, but... well. It is a sad turn of events to see that defeating the enemy seems to require becoming so much like them"

Lissy: Oh sweetie, there's no need to have your deadname in your bio. That's not you, so why not be a good girl and remove it?

Hilda: Liss....what in our name has gotten into you?

Lissy: Relax, Hildie, I know how trans girls work. Call them a good girl and they'll do anything you tell them to!

Hilda: I...can you stop? I feel gross hearing you say that.

Lissy: Very well, I'm sorry. I suppose she's still in a position of leadership, even if she's just a human.

Hilda: The fact that she still claims to be Christian is fascinating to me. Especially if she also claims to be a Marxist, but I won't pry about that sorta thing.

Lissy: The teachings of Christ were quite compatible with modern socialist policy, were they not?

Hilda: I dunno, I never read that shit. I guess I'll leave her religion alone.

Lissy: Anyway, I like what the Lady Ambassador has done with her hair! Quite lovely.

Hilda: I can't believe she'd put herself on the flag, whatever her hair looks like. Narcissist much?

Lissy: Hilda, have you looked at our domain's flag, recently?

Hilda: No. Dunno why we even have a flag. To appease the human nations and their silly traditions?

Lissy: Ah, something like that. Anyway, we're getting a bit off track. I offer the Lady Ambassador my fond regards.

Hilda: And if you wanna taste of real power, hit us up, right? Working with us has all sorts of benefits. And again, sorry for my girlfriend saying silly things.

Lissy: That really necessary?

Hilda: Yeah.

Lissy: Eh, I suppose you're right. Hey, did you know that girl has a degree?

For the relevant F7 threads, the girl on the left is Hilda, and the one on the right is Melissa (Lissy).

A class 13.8 civilization, according to this thingy. Assuming the Mistresses stay home. They probably will, they're actually pretty lazy.

"Wait, so there are two mistresses, or shapers, who jointly lead their country?"

That's odd, countries would normally have only ONE leader, not two or more. But either way, both of these mistresses did interest me to some sort of degree. So let's start with Ms. Chen, or 'The Chromatic' if she prefers. She was a part of RealiDe, which seems to be a human organization, which, depending on the activities it does, I could possibly support. But what's with being shattered and then having your powers increase exponentially? And now she signifies 'warmth and light'? I also cannot ignore that she's the second sharper, which isn't necessarily a bad thing, but shouldn't the first be leading the country too? Anyways, onto Mr. Harrow, or 'the Sharper Temporal'. I like how she was a trusted and loyal partner of the Chromatic's. I have a couple of trusted partners, in the President and in the Army. I also like how she can stand up to her enemies, and would care for the people. As for her powers of physical strength, she seems to receive it just like Ms. Chen did. So, does that mean she was also shattered? Just wondering, because that would seem quite likely in her case.

Again, to be honest, I haven't really seen joint leadership in any other countries than Yuroluce, and what makes the leaders even more unique is their powers and how they achieved it. It's just something that I personally found to be very intriguing."
