"I am too much of an oldie to understand what "Magical Girls" is... You are a zombie? You don't look like one in the movies. But, coming from someone who has lived through the Great Depression, I understand your old struggles in living with a poor family barely scraping by. But that's where the similarities end, my father fought in the Western Front and died on the line of duty as a Police Sergeant. If I found out my own daughter is a magical girl and wants to cleanse the world of evil then I would've had a good laugh before lecturing her that the world isn't so simple between good and evil. I wouldn't drink my sorrows away and kill my own wife if I was your father. You deserved better."

However poverty, economic inequality, and crime is on the rise as SF becomes the site of a power struggle between a resurgent Japanese Empire and a rump US in the Rockies after a Soviet Cold War victory. It is up to the effort of the elite if troublesome SAU in keeping the peace in SF as conspiracy abounds.

"Captain, huh? I was a captain too, you know? Different kind of captain, but our goals remained the same nonetheless - keeping the leaking ship from sinking. While we certainly got wet, we came back to port every day fully accounted for. I am sure you can't say the same, Captain - but that is not your fault. I live in the privileged position of the president of some islands. It's still a tough job, but you know what, my definition of a 'murder spike' is '2 people were murdered instead of 1.' I am sure someone like you would find something like that laughable unless the spike was happening in an apartment complex. So, I cannot say I blame you for being job-focused and desensitized to it all. Hell, I can even appreciate someone who is so dedicated they are able to shatter friendships in order to keep law and order. It's better to draw a line and keep to it rather than keep pushing it. And hey, I am pretty sure I would be desensitized to if I was alive since... the great depression. Yeah, yeesh. And I thought having to live during the cold war was bad, you had to see the Second War, Korea, then witnessed the US collapse. You may not be perfect, but man... your city isn't either. I can forgive a few slurs if it means keeping a city with millions of people from turning into Iraq... Riiight, that's a bit ahead of your times, isn't it? How's Saddam doing? "

There is also something about MACs, which, if some of you might know, my friend Gwen has one! She carried that around like it was nothing, haha! Anyway, about yourself, so I have read your dossier, as you have read about Clarissa's- or was it someone else? Hmm, I am not sure. My database indicated that you did interact with Gwen. That is not really a problem, of course. We are friendly people! As for yourself, I am not sure if you are comfortable with this kind of lifestyle, but I feel that you do serve a way of life that is not all about fighting, you know? Maybe a little bit love, care, happiness, here and there! I know it is easier said than done - and even we came from a world with constant violence, from what I have been told - but you guys could always try! And you could get that break that you might think of getting - maybe a vacation, or something, anything to help you out! Anyway, I am neutral-positive with you for now, since we have just met, but don't worry! Just talk to me more, and we shall become friends, or even close friends, if you want to go that way! ♥

"Gods, what is a god? Everyone around me likes to imagine him as some muscular sky daddy, it must be an Indo-European thing that clung on since the Bronze Age though the people who recorded your existence seem to have a more Manichean view of morality. My Americans would never imagine some big bad paternal god of 'Tyranny' to take the form of some twink with a crappy Hot Topic mask. How quaint, though...it must be real comforting to know that some kind of objective morality exists where you're from Mister God. The whole meaningless shits and giggles really does seem to sell the whole bit about existential despair though, or liberation, our pick, as mortals.

Now onto your feats: Let's see war of gods? Web of lies? Seriously? And you spent your formative years lying to these folk to the point they didn't trust you for a while but you still managed to deceive them? Your skies must be full of idiots. I've made a lot of mistakes when I was a kid, I wasn't eons old or something. Tell ya what, those idiots deserved to lose if you beat them, Air Fleet would never allow liars to go far. It's funny to see that John C. Lilly is correct about cosmic bureaucracy though, I wonder if dolphins are your servants too.

Anyways, what to infer? As an agent of chaos that destroys to create...you are an interesting figure for mythology or literature nerds that blather on about archetypes and plotlines. But you're completely and utterly unreliable to me or my people. Great fun at a party, maybe so. But that's just about half of the world population too, give or take. Hell, how am I supposed to know that the information you relay -personally- is reliable? More standards than Yona or that funny Japanese goddess? Heh, subjectively speaking, everyone has more standards than them. That's not setting the bar low, it's digging for potatoes. I'd sooner trust those potatoes too."

Still, I have seen stranger, so who am I to judge, ahaha! Anyway, where do I start? Hmm, quite a long reign there, with interesting history to boot. A lot of written accounts and history regarding yourself - from your rule and reign, to the wars and battles that you have fought. 75 years, whereas an average person would last anywhere from 20-50 years in an office. Or in more modern times, maybe 8 years maximum - 2 terms for a POTUS. I err... I don't think you know what a POTUS is; President of The United States. With that said, I suppose I will read about your career with great interest, even if the stories of kings and queens have certainly not been something I was particularly interested in. I mean, I have only read through 6.4 sextillion novels about Prince Charles alone, you have no idea how many worlds are out there.

"Poor old man, he's seen a great deal of war and felt a great deal of pain, more than me, I bet. I feel a sort of kinship with him in that, we are not countrymen, we are not kin, we are not comrades, but we both know war and its effects, and we have to live with those effects no matter how painful it is. I won't begrudge him for his indulgences, that'd make me a hypocrite, we all do what we have to in order to keep going. He's not completely a sad clown, though, he's devout to the god of his people and honors the memory of his friend and pays respect to his fallen kin. Not only this, he remains dutiful, and does good work for his country despite everything, and doesn't allow himself to get caught up in political nonsense. I wish him well, and hope his beleaguered mind heals.

"So APPARENTLY this little shit isn't actually a reincarnation of Arotex. I'm not sure if that's good or just makes things worse. I'm going for the worst and I won't bother acknowledging his crappy life. I hate him so much. He just reeks of that overbloomed Shura-something smugness and to tell me. That he isn't Arotex at all, just a completely original character with a very asshole personality, just like Arotex. You just got to joking, like really. I don't believe the user that created him, not to be, too similar, too familiar, and too making me want to square him in the face. To hell with maintaining Multiversal Hegemony. I want to sock him in the face, right in the face, right in the god damn face. I'm sure that FEELING OF MUTUAL HATRED is shared and so why don't, we raise our sleeves and start beating the COSMIC FUCK out of each other, Yes? Yes. I agree. Let's relive the shitshow back in '17. I'm sure, everyone will love it. Fate probably not so much, but like since when did I ever care what a Valentinian hippie ever says? Well besides that time with the diabetic Evil for the sake of it, One of the Horde. "

Victor van Stein is, well, super interesting and unique. I like how he is the so-called "Creator and Master of the Omniverse". Being a leader of a country is a big responsibility, but I believe being the master of the omniverse is going to require a lot more responsibility. That must be a lot of work, and I praise your ability to keep it in place. Not having a childhood is absolutely absurd, however. Everyone had a childhood, even me!

"Waldemar Rochester is a great example of what a failure of a leader looks like, men like him bring nothing but misery. I've seen his like before, Adruan Bertuan of Lovackia for example. Well we won the last war against that type, so as much as I'd prefer it not come to that again, we're ready to take up arms in the name of Life and Liberty again if needed."

"This man ruled for 10 terms? How long is each term in this country? Anyway, Nikita is the type of person that was born a leader, especially when you combine good speaking skills and good management skills. He also must be extremely knowledgeable, to have considered such smart economic plans, you need to have some background and this guy is both addicted to reading and addicted to getting as many degrees as possible. And it's not like all of this is at the cost of extreme political repression, he himself said that every person killed is a tragedy. So my conclusion is... how is he so achieving? and this isn't some communist dictatorship where you only hear about the good things about their dear leader, Onocarcass seems to be a rather free, democratic country."
