The culture of their nation is determined by climate. For example coastlines are filled with a large amount of urban centres. Fishing is one of the main sources because of how easy it is to feed their population.

Well, that their language, whatever it is, has a lot of Persian influences in it. Their queen is named "Nazanin" (a word which means "Dear" in Persian), her husband (and predecessor) was named Jamshid (meaning Royal Light or Bright Light), et al.

OOC: The primary vernacular language is just a cipher of Tajik Persian, yes. The liturgical language is however a ground-up conlang with significant Akkadian, Hurrian, and Gaelic inspiration. As for the Queen's name... let's just say it's ironic for plot purposes.

"Nuuk Animism is an umbrella used to describe all traditional beliefs held by the native tribal groups that inhabit Kronova. Most such beliefs center around a combination of ancestor worship and reverence of various animal spirits, such as The Bear, The Elk, and The Rabbit. Much as with Kovac Folk Religion, many of the various Nuuk communities carry on the faith as a part of preserving their culture."

This sounds like it's inspired a lot by IRL cultures around the arctic circle, and given the name Nuuk sounds vaguely Kalaallisut it's not surprising

Although there is no majority ethnic groups, Slavs (mainly ethnic Russians) are the largest group. About 41% of all ethnicity. They total about 47% of their nations population. Ethnic Asians make up the second largest group.
