"Alastair is an interesting individual to say the least. He is quite a moderate leader in my opinion, humble, likes to keep to himself and doesn't get involved in things that do not require his involvement. To be honest I appreciate these qualities, although his alcoholism is somewhat of a concern. As far as his ideology goes for the most part I agree with his social and economic stand points. In fact I see more parallels in our beliefs than conflicts"

So many unnecessary deaths stemming from his beliefs, so much so that they actually have a difficult time trying to repopulate themselves. How asinine is that! It's a shame on how such a man, who has such a potential, went about this way. I do wish I can travel there, or at least have Gwen to tell me about the wonders and dangers of their world, but I feel like this is one of those things that I should not know in full detail. It's quite amazing how he has such a large number of recordings for future events. If there is one thing I can at least compliment and give credit where it's due, that he is wildly prepared and he has a lot of plans for every step that he takes. Quite a meticulous one, just like Jamie! Where's she?

I am personally unfazed by that, not as a form of bravado, but I don't think we will be fighting each other any time soon. Shoot, maybe we can even be friends! With that said, I am more or less positive on her, compared to that other Tiger fellow that one of my friends have the pleasure of meeting. Despite her barrel of rage, she seems like a sensible person - Militaristic, neutral on pacifism. Good!

Edit: Alright good sir, who appeared from nowhere, wait till I do one for Arslan.

"Arslan transited from constitutional monarchy to absolute one. He is a benevolent leader, but what about his heir? Will the heir treat his absolute power with responsibility, and his people with dignity? Children of this sultan learn together with common folks, but personal character is something too complicated to be defined solely by that. We may not understand each other always due to mentality and culture differences, but this won't harm our friendship. We may appreciate cultures of each other, and this is what unites the people.

And yes... Gotta admit, if I was a dude living in Arshanid Deccan, with my sexuality, local authorities would whip me till my skin becomes tanned leather. But I believe, this little matter can be overlooked, since establishment of woman equality on practice within an Islamic country is a feat worthy of a legend."-Shawn Bjornson
