Or drives your policy-making, I suppose. And yet... what do I comment on here? I see no mention of her stance towards, or actions relating to, scientific progress or anything of the sort. I suppose she's set a decent framework, what with all the universal education and whatnot, but that framework is yet to be elucidated upon. As it stands, I feel as though she's been sidetracked somewhat. All this power, and she uses it to... what, gently enforce the social norms she considers optimal? Fight a god every once in a while? Bah. And what's all this gobbledigook about "religious openness"? Why would something like her bother with religion? I come away from this with more questions than answers, and no clear-cut opinion to give beyond "she has potential". PMT/Early FT - Decopunk. Zitragrad is a crowned republic in a planet somewhere else in the universe. The formerly wartorn nation keeps a facade of normalcy and order while enjoying the societal and cultural decadence that marks the new Roaring Twenties. The paranoid authoritarian government tries its best to uphold order in the face of uncertainty, while its people want nothing more than a breathing space. A deal that works, but maybe not in the long run. |

"He might be a fellow anarchist, who's got a point in many things, for example, the rights of the people are self evident, but to my taste, Le Patron is too murderous and bloodthirsty. If I ever come to him, he might get me a drink, lay me, or try to kill me and get my smell for some sort of perfect aroma, like in "Perfume: The story of a murderer.", while using my skull as an inkpot for some weird piece of art and my blood for drawing a beautiful futurist painting, and not many people would ever understand it's true meaning. And that's because he would say, he loves me. Still, I have a feeling, that unsettling he might be, he somehow holds off even greater evil on his lands. *Huh, one of the youngest chancellors of the city at age 28? One could say that 28 isn't exactly "young", but I guess that it is when most of rulers are 40-60 year old hags robotic chuckle Her skills with computers and such suggest that she is good for STEM subjects and such. That said, not too much is known about her past - like are there any family such as parents, siblings or others who know about her or give support, or has she been kind of a lone wolf?*

She seems to have got a good balance between the STEMlords and humanities majors, and that is good. Just a pity that she has only two year mandate, but hey, democracy is democracy it seems. That said, she shifted from futurists to humanists, but they don't seem too much like enemies or at odds with each other - perhaps a coalition could form?

Personality-wise she seems to be sweet, but be careful around our introverts - for them it will most likely be tiring. Overall she's decent, although I too question her lack of seriousness in situations sometimes, just like her peers in government.

"Suddenly, after just a handful of interactions, I'm completely on board with the weapons side of the Manhattan project. I guess it wouldn't actually do anything to a being with magic and all, but it'll be our best shot anyway."
—President Washington

"I don't really understand her religious intolerance, I gotta admit. I've read the Quran before in class, and though I'm not religious at all - most of us aren't, really - some of the verses are quite beautiful. Maybe she'd like to discuss it over tea sometime? My girlfriend can brew up a black tea so good, it'll make your heart melt."

-Naomi Sun, Chancellor of Pacifica Solaris
