"Ms. Almira is quite an interesting person, one who cares about her people from the looks of things. I find it admirable that Almira allows how faiths to flourish in her nation and that is a good thing. Everyone should be allowed to practice their faith without being judged by other faiths. I also like that she is against slavery considering my community was a slave to the old Overseer of our community, anyone who is against evil is good in my books. As of right now my opinion on Almira is positive." - Overseer Victoria Quinn

"Long ago, there was a great general skilled in all facets of war except for one crucial thing: delegation. He was a strong leader of men, and could easily visualize the field of battle and make best use of his terrain, but he could not trust those who served under him to act on their own initiative. So focused was he on managing the entirety of his army in this way that, at the beginning of a crucial battle, he collapsed from exhaustion. His men, so used to operating under his supervision, were left without a functional leader in his absence, and so suffered a thunderous defeat that effectively shattered his army and all confidence in his capabilities.

"I see this tale in you, overseer. You have in yourself the makings of a great Cala among our people, being skilled in many things and commanding such respect among your people. However, you take too much of a burden upon yourself, and the signs of strain are visible to all with the eyes to see. As a Cala, I accept that I am not knowledgeable in every possible facet of battle or the logistics of war. I am a master of war because I know where I am weak, and I know who among my people is best suited to stand for me. In battle, a soldier must learn to trust the man or woman to either side, that they know what they are doing and are able to catch things that they might have missed with a passing glance. Trust your people. Give them the chance to shoulder some of your burden, and your leadership will be unassailable. Learn from this, and understand." - Cala Vermuth Iron Tiger

Now, I admittedly understand why the Philippines had anti-Chinese sentiment in his timeline, considering that the Chinese were and still are a threat to Filipino sovereignty. Though, I don't really care for or against racial laws on them. I mean, they're both just squinty-eyed Asians in my eyes, so I don't really care. Though actually thinking about it, wouldn't you WANT interracial mixing to eliminate the Chinese threat? You know, assimilate the minorities? Honestly, it reeks of the excesses of Know-Nothingism.

As for Navarro himself, he seems to be your average career politician in East Asia. Born into the civil service, engaging in intrigue to gain power, having connections with the corporate world. More evidence that is the West that carries the torch of liberty!

Also, he looks like a cult leader with his outfit! Or, a Nazi samurai rambling on about the Spear of Destiny and how the Jews fear the samurai. Now, that'd be hilarious!"

Of Speaker Karl Fischer there is not much which can be said. He is a brave revolutionary for fighting within a socialist party rendered illegal by a reactionary government. He fought for democracy and liberation and went to prison for it. He organized the organization which would tear down the hypercapitalist system that labelled him a terrorist and criminal for fighting on the behalf of the people.

Karl is a revolutionary. Karl is a agent of revolution and progress. Karl is a comrade of all democratic Ankrasians.

"my opinion on Inteins Arek is long overdue, even more so to the point where his own opinion would no longer be valid due to the changes that have been made since he gave it on me. either way, i have not forgotten it, and i would be happy to touch on a few things with him as well. The whole Empress title is no longer a thing, as is my outright disdain for democracy, which i now allow the people to elect in a devolved government. Also yes, I have only ever used my power to protect those who I have brought into my realm.

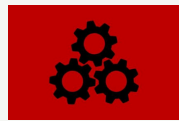

Anyway, onto my opinions. Inteins is definitely one of those kinds of leaders who genuinely care for the wellbeing of his own people, and a lot of his programs and policies back that up, such as the ones to ensure that homelessness is eradicated, everyone has at least one meal a day to keep them going, and healthcare that they can all access. i see that he is all for peace and a strong welfare, something that i can always get behind. his view on capitalism is mostly agreeable, just that i would not be entirely against it, its just something that needs very heavy regulation for it to not be abused from greed or corruption.

all being said, he has offered to be open to working with me as equals, and with someone like Inteins, I would definitely consider such. my opinion is neutral positive.

"The problem we have with Sera is that she has all the best views and the views which would normally translate to a strong, prosperous society. Unfortunately for Platinia, Sera's extreme environmentalism completely ruins all of it leaving underutilized planets laying about all to save literal insects. Platinia would be so much better off if Sera were to allow these planets to be exploited to their fullest for the good of the people. We understand she doesn't want to expand her domain as we in Octavia do, a view which we can at least understand for an organic civilization, but leaving her planets underused puts her nation in danger of those that do use their resources effectively and should one of these potential threats gain the ability to overcome her own significant power, then she would doom her own people to annexation. For this reason, we are neutral on Sera. Her rulership is good for the most part, but that one policy is so moronic that we cannot endorse her in any way."

QUOTE

"The madam from valentine and I hold poor opinions of one another I must clarify my many previous statements, however. I can see our nations working fine with each other, however, this supposed 'personification' is certainly not human, and I would prefer to perform any diplomatic action taken with a human proxy. I know it would be an inconvenience, but only humans should rule human nations." - Protector Johannes-Paul of Antioch
