OFFICE OF THE PREMIER

Regarding Emperor Narcissus VII,

What a wholly captivating specimen. Murderous, insanely driven, undoubtedly intelligent, yet completely devoid of the pathos. If asked, I'm sure he'd deny sleep terrors and an inability to cope with his infinite evils. While others would take his dark and imposing attitude as a front, I haven't a doubt this is him, born, raised, and as he shall die.

As a Pastor I am always asked to prove the existence of God- the Father Almighty. I respond that if the Devil and his evils exists, then God does too. Here, here lies your Devil. Your Satan Incarnate. In the form of Emperor Narcissus VII. The Devil doesn't wear Prada, the Devil wears a black turtleneck. And I wear the sign of the Lord.

"Ms Alexandra is a bit of a let down really. I mean, does a nation need a monarch to support the military? I'm sure your country has enough war-hawks to keep your army floating. I guess I'll jot you down as one of those 'pretty face' monarchs. I mean, you are pretty in my eyes at the very least but unfortunately, that's not enough to make up for your shortcomings.

Hey, you're 23. I'm sure you can make your mark in history. Maybe you could be the change your nation needs and implement a democratic system?"

I will not lower myself by making “friends” with this barbarian in human flesh. I will only hold myself from seeking the annihilation of Skyhookedian “culture” as war, at the moment, doesn’t align with my current plans. Rapture City

- In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. Yet the people would be in for a surprise as their virtual overlord have died many years ago as the oppression continues under his name...

See, most of us would have the decency to die after falling into a black hole, that is if the nuclear apocalypse hadn't already done us over. But not Gwen, God knows how. To be honest, that alone would be enough to make me respect her, or at the very least make me think twice about getting on her bad side. More than that, I can say with near certainty that she means well and has a good heart. Is that naive? Maybe - the aforementioned nuclear war did happen under her watch, but who could put that sort of blame on one person? OFFICE OF THE PREMIER

Regarding King Oni of Low Bloods

Professionalism. Discipline. Self-restraint.
All characteristics of the sympathetic human. This disfigured-human possesses none of it. I have all the right, both morally and legally to call this abomination an animal. A hellspawn. A possessor of witchcraft, and a coiner of dark magic. Quebec still possesses exorcists of the trained variety, and they would have a field day with such monsters.

"State-run exorcism? Now, today I learned it is a thing, or at least still is a thing in some corner of some other world. The Premier never fails to amaze me with his passionate zeal and sense of duty. But here, he is such a reflection of my past religious beliefs. Like many others, I put too much faith in God that I overlooked the fact that I am in charge of destiny. Whatever you refer to God's blessings is merely chances one cannot explain, driven forward by human interactions towards one another or conditions of this world. But I suppose his Reverend can, and will, rule out that God wrote the conditions of the world... and that's less than entertaining for me. If you keep cutting down every hypothesis as an act of god, there will be nothing left to think about. My cigars will be left unsmoked... and that's going to be unfortunate."

"Still, just because I dislike his way doesn't mean that I can appreciate the Premier's passion for his duties. As long as he keeps away from trying to radicalize people in my circle -- especially the Grand Prince -- we will at least be on polite speaking terms."

"I am afraid I must take issue with this alleged Emperor. Firstly, he is far too young and inexperienced to be granted so lofty a title as Emperor, being barely more than a child. I suppose this is why an elective monarchy is decidedly superior at producing effective rulers. Secondly, while it may be improper for me to speak of this, I have some problems with his personal life, particularly his relationship and marriage with another man. Marriage! even the ancient Greeks didn't go that far. Even if we disregard the blatant immorality and unholiness of such a union, there s the question of succession. How is he supposed to produce an heir to continue his line? Essentially, I consider him to be supremely unworthy of holding an Imperial title, and ultimately unfit to serve as ruler of the people of Antarctica."

"My, my, Voltaire's nightmare. Except it isn't. Sadly, Voltaire probably would've loved this guy's reforms. This guy pretty much is everything bad about the Enlightenment with barely any of the good. I mean besides abolishing serfdom and expanding literacy, the guy basically eliminated the guilds and centralized the state. Capitalism and liberal centralized states are truly cancer, and only end in sweatshops or nuclear annihilation. Trust me, I'm from the alternative future. Don't do it. Only syndicalist industrialization can bring salvation to a nation. I also find enlightened absolutists to be self-righteous, though I guess limiting the death penalty to the guillotine is fine by me. Still creates the public shows that I crave. Though, I think only the noose is fit for the n-----. Hehe.

And before you folks complain about nobles, you literally have Switzerland down south as a model of a good confederal republic. And, they're so damn tough that the world hires them as mercenaries. Even your 'empire' needs the cooperation of city-state republics anyways

I guess religious tolerance is also a good thing, except not all religions are equal. Fundamentalist dipshits really can only be convinced by the bullet. Trust me, I know from experience. Guess, you don't have anything like Mormons in your land. Anabaptists? No, they keep to themselves. Though really, I actually support more hardcore protestants in Europe. In Europe, Lutherans and Catholics are dickheads. Or well, the clergy at least. They're only not dickheads in America, where they're thankfully far, far away from church control. Lousy Christians who see Sunday as a meet-up day and snore in church are the best Christians in my opinion.

That and your government is fundamentally a lie. It isn't holy. It isn't Roman. And, it sure as Well, I guess you made it an empire, which makes it suck even more. Why can't the people 1848 your ass already? WAAAAAAHHHH!

Pickett is... certainly a unique sort. From his eccentric mannerisms and dress, to the way in which he conducts his rule. His supposed immortality, and apparent tendency to cling to personal power, both belie a failure in one of his core ideological tenets - his belief in democracy appears to only exist so long as he is capable of "guiding" said democracy. Which I would have no issue with, were it not for the fact that he seems to utilize his support for such as a tool for self-righteous proclamations and the petty acquisition of moral high ground. He claims to be against autocracy, and yet he embodies perhaps the most insidious aspect of such, while at the same time highlighting the failures of the democratic processes he supposedly lauds. Economically, there is little alignment between us - no surprises there. But it is in his attitude to subsets of the human race that we truly stand apart. How can a transhumanist - one who believes in the necessity, nevermind the ability, to surpass the human norm, still be limited by considerations of skin color and ethnic origin? Such idiocy is... not unexpected. Not quite that - for I have no real idea of what to expect from a living contradiction such as Pickett. But certainly, it forms the primary flaw in a political character already beset by scores of its minor brethren. In short, my opinions of Pickett are soured primarily by his backwards ethnic attitudes, though a smattering of additional pitfalls, eccentricities and quirks all serve to provide an additional source of weariness.

HMS Belfast: "Due to Her Majesty's thick accent and Elizabethan English being a cause for concern, I shall be reading her views on Mr. Rasput."

HMS Duke of York: "What art thou thinking? Thy accent of mine is a most delectable of accents! Even an acquaintance of mine says my accent is grand, and I shall not stand for thee!"

HMS Belfast: "Affirmative, your Majesty."

HMS Duke of York: "Well, I have to try to speak "Proper English" now.

Anyways, I believe that Mr. Rasputin is a well respected leader, whose policies, though risky at times, have led to great success. However, his conservative and far-right focus on defending his country can be described more as isolationism than patriotism. I believe that if he could just be a bit more open to the world, it would bring him great benefits. Art thou happy now, Belfast?"

HMS Belfast: "Yes, your Majesty."

Regarding King Oni of Low Bloods

God bless the dead, at least the past Kings of Low Bloods held a candle to the trait of interesting rather than this living comic-book character. I've spoken to children who come to me with nightmares of these half-bred deformities. Otherpeople would often let grievances go under the rug, but not for King Oni. I want a full public inquiry into where the funds for his structural remodeling came from. International Relations be damned.
