My nation is probably a cliché, just being something that represents my own views in a way that's offensive to no one but also uncreative, and with a mostly-plausible but shallow alternate history built around them. I've already seen plenty of such nations.

My nation - which is pretty much just a unified Korea with some extra territory - represents my real views, as does pretty much anything I say on the forums. NS stats only broadly representative. Feel free to call me Q&K, Quartia, or any other nickname.

Yeah, those deserve to have the shit taken out of them in force. I'm pretty glad the mods lock them, tbh; discussing current events in your nation kind of feels insensitive and is more importantly nearly impossible to not use as a soapbox to shout your chosen perspective on the issue from the rooftops. Pretty shitty subject all around.

This is especially p a i n to me

Like, my nation not only exists hundreds of years after modern times, but it's a medieval nation with possible fantasy elements. Why are you (As in people in particular, not anyone as an individual) asking me what they think about the 2020 election/trying to apply COVID/whatever to my nation? And it's not just Wexas either. I really had a dude try to ask a 17th century Irishman what he thought of Communism, an ideology which doesn't canonically even exist yet.

I don't know how many burgsys nations I've seen at this point, probably like seven or so, but as far as I'm aware only two of them - one of which arguably doesn't really count - have actually had quality content and I'm convinced that it's going to stay that way for the rest of this site's existence. TNO copy-pastes in general are annoying to see, but Burgundy is especially common, and particularly egregious as well because the people behind them tend to think that you can convey a bleak atmosphere like that just with references and "heehoo black sun himmler nuke". It's honestly just like the people who shoehorn SCPs into their military for spookiness in that it's extremely lazy writing, doesn't remotely succeed in keeping the "spirit" of the original, and feels like a disservice to the established content they're ripping off.

Huh, I have toyed around with an idea of making a Nationstates nation of despotist SBA set in 1972 (Where Stepanov coups the Siberian Soviet, and turns SBA into basically a military junta which masquerades as an anarchist society), but now I am not sure if I should do it or not.

We are a nation in the future, asking us what we think of the 2020 election or the COVID pandemic, would be like asking someone how they reacted to ww2.

The funny thing is that Valentine Z can definitely be a wealth of answers and knowledge regarding WW2 and Cold War because it happened so radically and differently. Cold War was such a subject to us that costed us so much, but the Valentians are willing to talk a lot about it. As for COVID and other pandemics, I did not put those into my nations because OOCly, it seems like a bad taste thing to do unless I know absolutely what I am doing; I guess if a MT nation does it, it's fine because of the tech level and if the subject and topic at hand are kept nicely. ICly, we are not just the nation to get pandemics anymore.

I don't have COVID as canon in this nation entirely because Gandoor is always set five years in the future and, while I can usually retcon minor RW shit as it happens, yeah I can't exactly go 'Oh yeah there was also the COVID-19 pandemic that totally happened in our nation I just never mentioned it before now but yeah it happened'. (Well I mean I could do that, but also no)

I've seen good TNO-based or inspired nations, I even linked one in my post - the trick is to actually write stuff you came up with so that it feels like it's yours. I personally don't really know much about TNO other than that there's a whole lot of nations on here that just copy-paste from its wiki and call it a day, but that seems like a fairly original idea so I'd say go for it if you'd like.

i mean my nation is basically american burgundian system but the key is to write unique material conditions and additions to that ideology to give it a distinct flavor, rather than copy whatever TNO himmler thought was a good idea. it's probably not actual burgundian system since it's innately linked to the institution of TNO Germany's SS anyhow

The inspiration from this nation came from people in the TNO-community calling Burgundy the "gamer utopia". So I then decided to create a nation led by "epic gamers" that is a borderline burgersys dystopia.

A parody nation, that's based on the worst aspects of gamer culture. Don't take it too seriously please.

I can't really complain, as my nation is not even finished nor 3D, but I've seen a lot of nomadic tribe nations. Nations who are set in the ancient times, where tribes rule over them.

Now I'm not complaining about those nations, but I've been seeing quite a lot of them. Might make a puppet one myself, but I have to finish this nation first..

I do like your nation, and I'm not trying to be rude to anyone who has chosen the tribe as the main thing for their nation. But yes I've seen the "monke is le funny" nations. Mostly in the forums. They all seem to lurk, I've never seen much actually comment.

Another cliché I've seen is the super authoritarian empires. The ones who are in space and all with their advanced tech. There are some who have executed this concept pretty well, but it would be nice to see more modern nations behind in modern things. Or maybe I'm just looking in the same corner, I don't really know.
