My Heart's Surrender - Chris de Burgh

(A note: I haven't been listening to the same song for half an hour. I just went through the songs that I had previously deemed too 'meh' to put in iTunes, and set up a special playlist so that I could listen to them and them alone.)

I don't have money to buy stuff right now. I only have the money I get from birthdays and such. Once I make my own money, I'll buy some here and there. Just to, well, support these great artists that I love so much (especially the lesser known ones that are probably barely scraping by). First priorities will be more Sigur Ros, though. I pre-ordered their latest album for an early birthday present (Since we couldn't get tickets to see them live). Then whatever I feel like afterwards. I don't feel like something like Mumford & Sons will suffer too much if I don't buy their album, or don't buy it for a long time. (Not that my small 10 to 20 dollars is immediately going to help, but yeah).

Understandable. You know, priorities. It doesn't help I have so much out there to buy, that I can't just throw out 100+ dollars on music left and right. Same with games, movies, shows, and so on. But thankfully Spotify artists you listen to actually supports the bands (Even if a tiny bit), so I'm doing at least SOMETHING. I still want to pay monthly for Spotify at some point...it's an amazing music device (That needs a god damn better sorting section. Going through my playlists is insane) music. It's great.

Getting on vinyl is worth it, CD's are a waste. I have the F#A#Infinity LP, it's heavenly blasting it through good speakers.

High Command, Earth.

we, unlike the bourgeoisie, have nothing to lose and therefore our expression will be the only honest one, our words will be the only challenging ones and our art will be the one revolutionary expression. We need new noise and new voices and new canvases to become something more than the last poets of a useless generation.
