They're very popular in F7, and although I haven't interested with them too much, aside from a few post replies here and there, they seem like a very cool person/nation in general, their love of penguins is also known throughout NationStates.

I see them a bunch in Forum 7, so its safe to say they're decently well known.

This is my second or third time seeing them while lurking, and judging by post count, I don't think they're very known on the forums too well

The nation age might mean they're more known on the gameside, but I'm not really aware of their gameside presence either

I haven't had the chance to meet, or even see, them yet; so judging by the founding date only. They appear to be a relatively new nation, and relatively unknown, however I am probably completely wrong due to my only recent exploration into the forums.

Also in response to the post count assumption by said AN; I am not sure that the post count is 100% accurate, as in the last week I have definitely made more than 2 posts at the time of writing.

Just so you're aware, Forum 7 posts are NOT counted toward post count.

I use total post count that's shown on the user page, as Forum 7 posts aren't counted in the display, so it should be accurate

I have never seen them but they have a ton of posts in a small time frame, so they are probably well know in a forum besides F7

I'd say they're pretty darn well known, judging from their join time, and amount of posts. They have a wide variety of posts, and are actively on F7 as well, so I imagine they're known there too.

Ninja'd.

They've also been on NationStates for quite some time, and I don't know them too well personally, but judging from their post count they're very well known on F7, and probably a few other places as well.

Don't know them but they seem to have done a lot in just two months on site, and I'm not active on F7 besides. Very detailed factbooks/worldbuilding so I could see them becoming pretty well-known as an RPer in the future.
