Probably no criminal penalty, but the second marriage would likely be annulled. There's a decent chance that the first wife will sue for divorce, too.

First offense: drones destroyed, and if the owner can be located they're jailed and investigated for espionage. If there is no evidence of espionage, they're released but must pay a 2% net worth fine to the government. If there is evidence of espionage, any useful information is extracted and then they're crucified.

Second offense: ten years penal labor (assuming there's still no evidence of espionage).

Third offense: crucified.

Depends upon the principality. Most are pretty strict about at least close affinity. Much easier on cousins, though, especially second cousins and beyond.

Distributist, pagan, history buff, civil libertarian, mostly republican, but willing to accept some monarchy as well being a big King Charles III stan. You've been warned. I'm also very skeptical and critical of Fourth Wave feminism. Delvian States is a confederal monarchy with autonomous principalities that often have their own laws. NS Policies aren't entirely reliable canon for that reason at least.

With their consent? Not a crime.

Without their consent? Six months in jail with rehabilitative therapy, as well as a fine of 5% net worth (or ten times medical expenses, whichever is greater) paid to the victim. The jail time and fine double with each repeat offense.

If the victim was fatally exsanguinated, 100% net worth fine to their next of kin and the guilty party is either imprisoned for life as an involuntary blood donor (if their blood is suitable for medical use) or executed by exsanguination.

If there are no resultant fatalities, the arsonist pays a fine of 25% net worth (or double the cost of materials and labor plus ten times the cost of medical expenses, whichever is higher), and spends one year in jail with rehabilitative therapy (five years if injuries resulted). Punishment doubles with each repeat offense.

If there are fatalities, 100% of the arsonist's net worth is divided among the next of kin, and the arsonist is burned at the stake.

In the case of a first offense of "hot-blooded" murder, the guilty party pays a fine of 100% of their net worth to the victim's next of kin, and spends no less than ten years in jail with rehabilitative therapy, sentence subject to extension if the guilty party does not appear to be rehabilitated.

In the case of a second offense of "hot-blooded" murder or first offense of "cold-blooded"/premeditated murder, 100% of the guilty party's net worth is paid to the victim's next of kin, and the guilty party is executed, usually in the same manner as the murder.

Note that the above assumes one victim, and no additional motives. If it was a mass killing or hate crime, the guilty party is tortured to death over as long a period as possible.

Depends on the art, the owner, or both. Usually returning and a fine, but in the cases in which the art is recognized as incredibly valuable, or the owner is influential/rich, then a harsher penalty, such as hard labor and a harsher fine, is usually implemented.
