Depends. Hell, in some cases wha5 is considered murder in western countries is perfectly legal here- such as dueling to death for example! However, actual purposeful murder carries harsh sentences, starring with 10 years of forced labor and most commonly, off with one's head.

Torture by the Federal Security Directorate and eventual capital punishment or enhanced lifetime detention (after the FSD has decided whether to investigate possible coconspirators or not). (enhanced lifetime detention is basically solitary confinement with added "things" to make it less pleasant to avoid the shame of such a misdeed- and complying with such an order is actually a recommended thing to do- because the enraged home and farm owners will try their best to shame the perpetrator and his family into killings themselves.

Doing just that- coercing someone to commit suicide?

Depends on whether the victim in question actually ends up committing suicide or not. Either murder or attempted murder, overall 20-Life in prison.

Pointing a gun at someone unarmed in public, unprovoked.

Can vary from malicious manslaughter (5 years hard labor to being worked to death in a penal colony) to Felonious Murder in the 1st Degree (death by hanging).

Varies from brandishing a weapon (or Intimidation with a deadly weapon) -- fined up to 6 months wages garnished accordingly and a trip to the psych ward for evaluation to 1 year in prison. to felonious brandishing of a deadly weapon -- up to 1 year hard labor, loss of civil rights (right to vote, bear arms, be at liberty) for up to 5 years.

Failed attempt at group suicide (Not your idea. Everyone else succeeded, but you gamed the system to survive)?

I remember answering one like this.

Art theft: Forced to return painting and up to half-value extra in punitive damages. Revocation of motor vehicle licenses permanently. Assuming that it was just taken while in a public space with no other crimes committed, a few months in prison.

Replace art with artifact, and that's it.
