Oswald's Mood: Alert and Antagonistic

"Um Gottes Willen, this maniac and her so-called Rote Armee Fraktion do not keep it a secret from everyone that their aims are to vehemently uproot the established order of things (through acts of terrorism) have made themselves appear more of a grave threat than a liberating force fighting against the existence of law and order, most importantly the existence of the fatherland at large."

"Committing acts of terrorism are signs that rationality is purposely made absent by the perpetrator, even a group of them, no matter the attempts they make to justify their actions. If this Commandante and her fringe movement of murderous communists believe their actions are for a just cause; such actions intending to spark a revolution among the people against a government they detest politically; actions geared to the destruction of an entire culture which endured for centuries against the tides of slaughter, then all veneer of rational thought in the skull of this Commandante is long gone."

"She, and the group she christened the 'Red Army Faction', will be attested in the books as nothing more than terrorists hellbent on bringing about the chaos communism will bring on a nation and the whole world should it successfully take over, though I doubt it greatly the herd of sheep which follow Marx and Engel will ever be triumphant on establishing communism on a global stage."

The Statement on Alastair

"Huh, it seems that his health has been on a downward spiral lately despite the best treatments, and we heard that he is septic as well. While we don't want to wish death for him, we will not mind if he passes away - the choice of the slob to ruin his life was ultimately his own. Sure, he received several tragic moments, but sinking yourself in alcohol is no solution."

"We do agree with him that monarchs in modern day should be civil servants, rather than absolutist-styled ones, but him attending the private school in combination with his spoiled past means that he still was privileged. Sure, he probably went through some pain in youth as well, but none of that was close to the pain which we collectively suffered for Karakalpakstan to be independent, for our children and grandchildren to have a country they could call home. Ultimately, he is the epitome of individualism in rulers."

"Honestly, it is both saddening and touching that your citizens overall still approve of you, despite being clear that your current state is not suited to be even a ceremonial head. Perhaps your younger brother should have been the ruler instead, but we don't know what issues he faces, so there is no guarantee that he would be much better."

"Not being affiliated with a political party? Sounds centrist to us. As for his stance on legalization of substances... no, just no. Some things are better off to stay banned."

But the people have been more pleased so I've been rather calm as of recent. So I've been looking forward to meeting most of the folk as I never got the chance when we were at war, I was actually looking to hide the nation in the shadows for some time.

But then I realized It wouldn't be vary bold of me to just hide away, we should coexist with other nations as we held many allies in the past.

And I wouldn't have met people like you of course, those that serve their nation in heart and in arms to ensure it's best for the people. I love courageous souls like yourself, and the many others around."-The first king

"A Parliament that is actually competent, at least at first glance? And it's made up of a representative from each nation? That is very impressive. That they are divided into separate branches--for instance, scientific advancement and military--is quite interesting, as it ensures that multiple issues can be addressed simultaneously. Instead of a separation of powers, it is a separation of specialties. I am not sure how efficient this is, but I must say that I am not surprised that it is located in Switzerland. Hopefully, no one nation has too much of the power; at the same time, I hope the power is not so evenly distributed that no individual voice matters."

"After reviewing Emperor Xelden's profile the United Star Systems Parliament has come to the conclusion that our opinion the Emperor himself is neutral. For one he seems to be pushing for a more democratic future in his nation even going far as to limit terms on how long a Emperor and Head Senator should rule in which we respect him for pushing democratic values within his nation. The only thing the United Star Systems Parliament disagrees with him on is when he directed resources to the military rather than the civilians themselves especially banning the possession of luxury resources. With that said we respect Emperor Xelden in pushing for a democratic Cosmicum, but the banning of luxury resources is tyrannical despite the circumstances that he was facing at the time."-United Star Systems Parliament.

Naevora Xelden is only the Head Senator, Kasren Vereyn is the Emperor.

If I am being honest, WF really does not function. But it's so small that most things it does will not affect the rest of the world.

Oswald's Mood: Deprecatory

“Like Kal’Shazzar, I don’t see her in the same light as a leader I would recognize as having the authority of...a leader. No, more, less I see her position is equal to a Reichskommissar, or really, a puppet under the influence of an even greater figure of authority, that being Sarathress. She may be swift with her blades and in the mind, to recognize her as the ‘queen of assassins’ would be like equating a mere thief to a master criminal.”
