Immediately after its secession from Iran in 1921 (which I am curious about. Reza Shah would not just let the largest Iranian Oil Fields go that easily), Ilam fell into a state of disarray by the Arabs -who probably in tune with the Arab Nationalist movements of the period all over Middle East, wanted to form an Ethno-state despite being the minority-, and resulted in an ethnic cleansing of the Arabs by the Ilamite government.

Their leader, interestingly enough, served in the Navy and was the leader of the Eight-Nation fleet. He later became the head of the Baltic fleet and then became the leader of Germany. Most leaders who served in the armed forces did so in the army, so it is a breath of fresh air to see a leader serve in the Navy. That's definitely a first for me, at least.

Hathian Prime does not use NS Stats.

They take their security very seriously and absolutely hate communists as they arrested tens of thousands of them just for being communist after a communist terrorist organization bombed a government building.

Most Burke Islanders are the descendants of 18th-century Acadian exiles from what are now Canada's Maritime Provinces, expelled by the British and New Englanders during and after the French and Indian War. They prevail among the region's visible cultures, but not everyone who lives in the Burke Islands is culturally Acadian or speaks French. Similarly, not everyone who is culturally Acadian is descended from the Acadian refugees.

Correct me if I'm wrong but I don't think copying and pasting from factbook entries is the point of the game.

Their military hardware in all their branches consists mainly of a mix of US and NATO assets, combined with models we don't know of...could be theirs...They also have an unspecified type(s) of carriers, of which, one curiously enough appears to be a Soviet-made Kuznetsov-class aircraft carrier.

Red wine is considered a fundamental element of Srovin culture. The company which produces it was formerly a state-owned enterprise, but was privatised in 2015.
