Summoning - Khazad Dûm

Black metal may have become my favourite genre.

Its sound is raw, yet also epic and atmospheric.

Black metal is probably one of the last genres I'll start delving into, along with hip-hop, death metal, punk music, emo, and screamo. Not to say I don't like stuff in that realm, it just isn't on the top of my priority to go through.

Probably said this to you already

My favorite genre for a while was post-rock and whatever people mixed with the songs, but lately I've gone through a lot of soundtracks and avant-garde bands.

Sleepytime Gorilla Museum is avant-garde metal/rock and progressive metal/rock

Black metal is excellent genre. My favorite genre changes all the time between thrash/doom/black metal. All are excellent, I can't put one above the other. In black metal I love the rawness and cold atmospheres.

It's the sub-genres of black metal that stand out such atmospheric and melodic. It's entirely different than what most people would expect from black metal.

My favourite genre flip flops a lot too between black/death/doom. Lately I'm liking the atmosphere of black metal which other genres lack.

I think I just haven't listened to the "right" black metal yet. There has been some I've enjoyed decently though recently, Summoning included.

Huh, now that I think about it, the vocals in this song kinda get closer to black metal vocal realm, though I wouldnot go as far as to say they are. Nils is quite the vocalist.
