Pierce the Veil - Yeah Boy and Doll Face

I don't either, they came to a local Rock Festival. It is one of two live shows I've been to, the other was a free Joel Plaskett concert on Canada Day.

PTV is a bit too screamish for me, though I do like their song King for a Day.

Nickelback - Someday

That's where our paths diverge ☐ PTV is softcore compared to a lot of bands I listen to, like Beartooth.

Yeah, I like just about every rock subgenre except the really heavy stuff, screamo, thrash metal, etc.

Our Lady Peace - One Man Army

Yeah, I like just about every rock subgenre except the really heavy stuff, screamo, thrash metal, etc.

Our Lady Peace - One Man Army

But those are the most fun

Paramore - The Only Exception

Edit: You'll also find screamo isn't a genre of music. ☐

Sum 41 - Screaming Bloody Murder

This song sounds very un-Sum 41, It's a bit strange. They actually sound a bit like Rise Against.

Is not. It's a gross generalization of a vast culture of completely different styles of music.

Under that definition, you could say Christian isn't a genre. (I don't think it is)

Christian is Gospel, which is a genre. I don't know, I don't deal with religious music.

Nope

People might use it incorrectly, but it's a term that refers to a certain subset of Post-Hardcore music.
