that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

Your nation is like a son. What it does right is your merit, as well as what it does wrong is your fault. When you praise it, be lucid and avoid exaggeration. Praising it too much can make it indolent. On the other hand, when you criticize it, be harsh, but do not ridicule it. Do your best to improve it, not through derision or disdain, but through good examples and dedication.

Shrunk my Brian Eno playlist down to only the ambient stuff I want to listen to...There was some other things I wasn't interested in.

Did the same with Philip Glass. Shrunk the playlist down quite a lot, mostly getting rid of soundtracks I don't know and ones that bored me with quick listens.

My playlist with like 180 songs that 90 are over 10 minutes long didn't like shrink at all, though...

Kronos Quartet shrunk some too.

I don't consider his stuff to be the most amazing ambient stuff but it is interesting enough.

I still think Small Craft on a Milk Sea is his best so far that I've heard. THAT one could be one of my top favorite ambient albums. Though it isn't entirely ambient.

To be honest, I go through a lot of "decent" music, or good music that I enjoy, but would probably never buy. Which is why I'm going to make a list of my top albums to buy. Only rarely do I get gems I think are the most worth actually physically owning.

Which still limits me to like 50 albums I want to own, at least, as top priorities ☐
