People perceiving creepy things and unsettling behavior as cute because a cute or attractive character does them. Kuudere in its entirety could count and I blame a certain character from a show about magical robots. Or just "quirky" love interests in general.

Really wanna make weebz conflicted with it if I do expand on Tepka's real personality and her thing for condescending monotonous monologues. "Aristocratic Ed Kemper-lite" could make for something more uncanny than the run of the mill femme fatale or Kuudere.

Oh also, any self-respecting "fancy" villain should be able to cook for their guests.

Hey hey, LP here: Too burnt out with this nation to make new lore or fix macrohistorical longue durée alt-his inconsistencies, too clingy to let it die.

The first and third sentences make me think of two series I have neither read nor watched but know too much about.

Strictly speaking that "certain German strategy" isn't that far from current US doctrine, and WWI tactics were used extensively by the both sides in a certain modern military conflict, though admittedly it didn't have a good outcome.

I never consider the Kuudere to be one of the more amiable traits without any creepy or unsettling behaviour. Maybe you got that confused for yandere or tsundere. However, I consider Himedere or Genki shojo to be pretty offputting, I don't like the posh socialite types. The Dandere types are my go to, those seem like the type that you can hug without any negative outbursts of energy of some type.

On NS that's often more Gish gallop than military strategy

In 2021, Lord President George Fenwick lost re-election and sacked Munkchester. He and his son promptly escaped from community service in Sweden to international waters. Today, still wanted by the government, they survive as slavers of fortune. If you have a problem, if no one else can help, and if you can find them, maybe you can hire... the Fenwick Foundation.

Do y'all think NS nations that are set on RL Earth in the present day but their canon doesn't have COVID-19 is a cliché yet or nah?

I mean I do that, but can you blame me? The world is so fucked up because of COVID, let me have my dumb fictional nations have some semblance of normalcy.

Depends on how RL it is I guess. Like, is it "Real Life but with this or that", or is it "Alternate History but situated on earth"? Honestly NSes who have the Covid-19 are the ones who're cliché to me.

The real cliché is nations that got COVID under control within a month or have never had any COVID cases despite the fact that COVID exists in their canon. This is probably wish-fulfillment though.

I'd say the reverse is more of a cliché, tbh.

Though, most people use it as a way to either A) Wank their supposedly world-class healthcare system, or B) Be edgy and have 25-50% of their population die in direct causation to the virus (not to make the virus seem less serious than it actually is, but a quarter of your population dying to Covid is just ridiculous).

Petition to add "not reading the damn RP rules" to the cliché list. I mean, honestly, how freaking hard can it be to follow a simple set of instructions? I've seen people epically fail at that in applying to a thread, let alone actually participating in the thread. Nobody knows how to fight a modern conventional conflict anyway so we can't really blame NS users for not knowing something even top military strategists don't know. If we base it on the 2003 invasion of Iraq, blitzkrieg style tactics still work. If we base our perception of modern conventional war on Ukraine it's going to devolve into a WWI style stalemate. If we base the perception on Karabakh 2020 then it's just drones plinking away at enemy defences so ground troops move into long abandoned positions. If a conventional war were to break out between Russia and NATO in Europe it could be any of those three scenarios, or something we haven't seen yet either. NS users are really just making their best guesses as to how a modern conventional war is fought based on what we see of war in the news and popular media.

I think I struck a decent balance with covid in my nation's canon. It exists, but able to keep any major flareups from happening similar to how Vietnam managed. I'd agree with others that it's probably more of a cliché to have it be a major issue in your NS nation, even though I can't understand why a lot of people want to RP that same lockdowns and public health restrictions that are giving us more time to do things like post on NS.

To put it simply: Hataria believed that he was perma-banned from the site because the mods worked with the 'bullies' on the site to have him banned because he was autistic.

I'm not gonna link to any of this stuff, but he made a petition to shut down NS because it was full of 'cyber-bullies and perverts' who ban anyone who disagree with them and they need to 'shut down the evil site for good', his DeviantArt was full of comparisons to NS mods to Nazis and acting as if Jennifer Government was somehow comparable to Mein Kampf, and he acted as if anyone in the comments on his DA who tried to get him to shut up and understand why he was banned from this site were bullies sent by NationStates to harass him off-site.

Also, I can't find it right now (and I don't want to) but I swear there was a post by a mod here a few years ago when Hataria returned to spam the boards about how 'NS MODS BULLY AUTISTIC USERS!!' or something where the mod revealed that Hataria had found their Facebook profile and they and their family had harassed them on it for 'bullying' him.
