Most likely a warning if you were not out in the open about it. Maybe a fine. We're not going to publicly execute you or ruin your life for not being able to find a bathroom. If you are doing it for other reasons however, it could result in a much harsher penalty.

Depends, if you end up on the interpol red list, that's an execution.

Property Invasion and Trespassing.

As in that case you would have no way of proving that your entry was not with criminal intent, you would be arrested for both criminal facts, furthermore, a judge could easily consider this as an attempt to invade the property through the use of force.

That being the case, you could spend up to 2 years locked up in a prison.

Not a crime officially, but depending on your area, corrupt Magistrates (which are a dime a dozen) will take matters into their own hands (charge you with another crime) if they don't like what you're doing.

Harassment is also a hefty fine, for provocation.

Murder of a wanted criminal.

No charges would be filed for most cases. Murder of someone who does something minor like theft will still be charged under murder and can land you up to 20 years in prison.

Depends.

If done to nobility? Death.

If done a commoner? No punishment, but the local gang may get involved.

Depends by each case, but usually it's just a very large fine of which is repayed the whole possession and an extra, but, if the case in question is very serious then there could also be some time in prison such as 8 months / 1 year, other than that the public official would get fired

They would likely be told to keep a low profile and await trial. Extradition laws between our countries would be reviewed and it would remain in limbo as we have no extradition laws. If the other power had large amounts of control in our region we would hand them over. If not we would promise to look into it and lose the file.

Not a crime right now. The Militia, Youth Brigades, and State Security Police have taken over law enforcement duties from the regular police, which have been disbanded due to disloyalty to the State. Summary executions are the order of the day. Trials have been suspended, along with habeas corpus and all of the rest of due process.

Ignoring a direct order from a policeman which happens to violate your civil rights (if your country has any civil rights, that is).

Occupied territories formed from the former US states of the New England region, once ruled by incels, but now liberated from that fascist, misogynistic regime.

The Abrahamic God is the most evil character ever created in fiction. It's a fact. Just deal with it.

If you can't resist a malignant cop, that's on you. The correct procedure would be to do what is necessary, and nothing less than what is necessary, in order to be consistent with your rights as outlined in the SIC Code Issue 20B Sector B2.
