He is a mixed blessing, I respect, but wouldn't like to live under his rule, cause I am such a free spirit of chaos and debauchery, and can't just get enough booze for me and my lovers. Plus, his prosperity didn't exactly last forever. Sun Tzu was right in his case, war does dull the spears and tire the men, the economy was eventually ruined and turned into ashes, controlled by oligarchs. Perhaps, he will be the phoenix, who restores from the ashes to new, but this is unknown. So far, his state is damaged from a drawn war.

Either way, many nation leaders can't even achieve half of the prosperity, he managed to achieve. Even with richer countries under their rule. Zuolin loved his country and wished it best. Zuolin tried and succeeded, only then failed." - Overboss Shawn Bjornson

"Honestly, I really like this guy. I think we'd get along great. Bjornson has a good head on his shoulders. I have nothing but respect for him and his leadership, he clearly knows what he's doing, and is in touch with wu-wei and ziran; "action without effort" and "original nature", and he has the two of the Three Great Treasures, "compassion" and "humility". He is clearly someone very close to enlightenment. I would hope to meet him. It would... be nice."

If you have the time, my corporation would like to study your brain in great detail since Valhalla has been looking for ways to upgrade our cybernetic brains. "Wow. CEO from New York City who only cares about themselves and their appearance? If there wasn't something more American. Her name might as well be 'Donella Trump', though from what I have seen, that might be unfair to Trump.

You and I, we're both what doctors would call 'Sociopaths.' I personally despise that label, that would imply I can't like people. But, we both kill people we don't like. We're both in positions of power and would like to maintain that power. So, in some ways, we are alike. But I still can't respect you. I fight for my kind. I fight to make sure the children of the future Suhwir can worship God in peace. What do you fight for? Money that you'll never be able to spend? Alcohol that makes you look and act like a fool while your liver slowly unravels? So you can get rammed by whatever hunk is popular at the minute rather than form a meaningful bond? You fight for yourself.

God has decided we will both die, it's inevitable. I will probably die alone, but you will die lonely. And when God separates the sinners from the righteous, I will be known for bringing peace through violence. I will enter the garden and be with God, but you will be cast into the flames. You will not find pleasure in paradise nor solace in Araf, you will burn for your sins for a very long time. Not forever, for God is merciful, but a very long time. And even I am wrong, you will not be known as a hero. I will be the George Washington - to put it in your American Terms - of my people. You will be the woman known for allowing the exploitation and death of a nation for her own personal greed.

And while you're at it, put some pants on. Nobody here is interested."

"You're sixty? Sheesh, politics has taken a toll on you. No offense meant I am not a shining beacon of youth either.

Going to be honest, there's not much I can say. You just seem like a generic European 'Green' politician. It's good you want to abolish fossil fuels. And hey, you don't care if two men or women want to have sex. But, from what I have seen, you live in a time and place of excess. You can do these things because they're easily available to you. Nobody's going to miss some factory in a rural part of the country closing because of policy. So, I must say, enjoy the good times while they last. I don't care what problems you're facing, you live in a time of excess. If you're going to make any big changes, do them now before it's too late. Western countries such as yours are unstable... it's only a matter of time before your implementing just ONE more environmental policy causes the largest unemployment crisis known to your nation."

Overall, while I am a tad bit disappointed by the shortcomings in regards towards his support for gay marriage and abortion, I am nevertheless pleased to hear that he has an all-the-round positive set of policies for his country, especially the one concerning the fishes though. "Come on, Commander... the first step of freedom is admitting that she could wear anything she likes despite how distasteful that dress looks."

"A military man -- of course there will be one every now and then, and we will eventually lose count. But it is our purpose that defines us... and this man falls into "the nation is a single machine" type. That makes two of us, Commander, but you are ahead of me with this mindset and I find that... interesting. I will not pretend I am no violent creature and I will not pretend that I am squirming at your use of violence against certain groups and the brutality of your discipline... and I promise I will not make a competition out of our records. There is no honor in cruelty, but there is efficiency."

"Now, though, your career is one impressive record -- you surely have been destined for something since you were one rather daring child. That is how many great men had grown up, with their stars shone early. And later on, you have never been shy of using power and authority, both soft and stern. Your causes have been noble, and your decision to stand with your people proves to be... fateful, even if reality is so often cruel. And you eventually became "reality" for other subjects of Fate -- men like us are not beyond political purges. Survival is the only salvation, even if we have to try sleeping over the bloodbaths we create. I wonder how well you shut your eyes at night, Commander. I hope you live with no regret, because you have done... what you could, and you are aware of your intentions and purposes more than others."

"Apologies, though... I am at the moment disillusioned by modern and post-modern issues and policies. I see that your views are at least agreeable to me. Agreeable as in I will nod along without either a frown or a smile on my face. You are respectable enough to let differences live under you, and certainly wise enough to know that needless oppression sows disloyalty and insurrection. One last thing here... Commander... is that I will watch you with keen eyes. Let us see if your displeasure for dictatorship and your intention to step down still remain after you taste the forbidden fruit. Power is a drug in a way."

I am really, really baffled by our friendship. From ideological standpoint, we are not even supposed to like each other. But we do. We conduct joint military exercises, we are willing to aid each other and such. An unlikely union, and yet even our people are friendly to each other. Zitragrad and Sky Reavers. Order and Chaos. After all, that is what we did for Valentine Z! Now it is still as united as ever, with Earth and Mars to boot. I was thinking we could get to Jupiter or Saturn next, but I don't know - conservation is not really that much of a deal because we can see the other parallel universes - just more of that I don't think we should recklessly expand if we don't need it yet, you know? Page 11

"This person they call 'Koshka', who is a soldier with a criminal record as noted in the dossier (a Class 1 Criminal), it did not surprise me to see any information about her as a person is classified, but I did expect it and I understand why. People these days do not give me the full extent of the things I want to know, and I admit it does disappoint me, but unlike those people, I cannot demand 'Koshka' to tell me everything about her as a person since she is not under my authority, only to the state she is in service of."

"It appears the people who have tested with her gave her great abilities beyond a normal man's, even beyond a normal soldier I should add. But I will let the one who thinks he is standing beware that he does not fall; and I assume she believes her prowess is unmatched, she must beware that her abilities will not lead her onto a stumbling block. I say this because too many people here are overconfident that they are 'standing' thanks to their clever wit, their great physical strength, their immense wealth and power they can invest into the things they prioritize. Most of them will 'fall' from the things they love most."

My personal thoughts concerning
'Pasca'

"Pasca should be careful with the words he will pour forth from his mouth, it was distasteful to hear him openly provoke God in such a disgusting manner like many others would do; to do so is like insulting your father to his face. And for someone who believes science is the answer to all our suffering on Earth, and believes it will replace the promise of everlasting life and happiness as assured to us by God, he is a terrible, terrible man who does not show love to his enemies but hates them because he is too emotional to do so. And if he does rule the whole world one day, Pasca will be like the Devil: both believe they can rule the world right without God, and disasters worse than the last culminates. Science this and science that, insult God here and there, they are the actions of a child, not of a scientist. And a mature one. For someone who possesses great wealth, one might think he would have been donating his wealth to charities instead of hoarding for his science projects that will not solve every single problem on this planet. And if his response is 'the ends justify the means', to justify the deaths of the other billions of people who do not want to die from disease, then I can assure him that he will fear the one who can destroy both the body and the soul. Not should, will."

"And again, Pasca should learn how to cultivate generosity and humility, and speak rationally like a scientist should."

In love with the er, hair, that is. Anyways, this is just another incoherent visual anecdote, I should really try to assess Miss Koshka's character both morally, economically, and politically, but that doesn't mean I'm any less impressed with her display of cosmetological artistic liberty. I'm certainly sympathetic with regards to her seemingly dichotomous philosophies of social interaction, that's for f*cking sure...it's a difficult skill to master even for the podium-poised-professionals such as herself. Frankly, I'm fearful about her state of mind in general, and I hope to god she speaks to a psychiatrist regularly; I mean, nobody with a brain coined as 'Pandora's Box' is bound to be of fit mental fortitude. Nevertheless, she possesses great skill, and she's a true and unequivocal virtuoso when it comes to combat, which I can't help but respect. I just hope I can remain on her good side... I wonder if it would be appropriate to send an engraved toy water gun as a semi-ironic act of good faith and friendly absurdity, but maybe I should save that for someone less militarily inclined, eh? It's a real thinker."

Doing Oswald from Das Kaiserliche Vaterland

"Well at least I now know why he died so early, no amount of exercise can compensate for no veggies. Did his mother forcefully feed him too many boiled broccoli? Also he says he's a conservative, for the standards of that time he's actually pretty progressive, especially on the whole racial equality thing, he hates socialism and communism but his modesty sort of makes up for it, he may be a capitalist but at least he's not greedy... I mean don't get me wrong he lives a lavish life but he didn't bankrupt the state with lavish parties like that other king, which did cause a less honorable death.

However I wanted to quote on embracing industry, cities, development and marshal tradition. I hope you don't turn your country into a smog infested, polluted mess and I hope he understands the problems with rapid urbanization, you know, take it easy, a nation isn't just GDP stats but the well being of everyone in it. Make sure that the standard of living actually increases for everyone, not just for factory owners, otherwise you might actually become communist. Social Democracy, the best way to avoid the wrath of the proletariat and seeing Stalin's portrait in your living room."

"Logistics are important sure, but in our doctrine, they are mostly important during first stages of fighting. Then we use more of looted ammo and guns, and scavenge alot to lessen the logistic strain. Revolutionary guerrilla legacy taught us that. I can tell him about our ways of resource optimization, if he wants, while he shares his own knowledge of the art of logistics and delivery. Atkhal doesn't lead on the scene, but he is one of those, who helps with a script, lights and cameras. Oh, and about the IQ test lopsideness and flaws... This dude had actually overseen construction of a dam and road between two obscure towns. Minor it can be in the dossier, it's still a pretty awesome feat, which requires competence and long term thinking. Roads require accounting for landscape, twice as much in complicated terrain. And dams require understanding of local hydrosphere, and even aquatic ecosystems. But IQ test didn't flatter him with the result. Perhaps we was tired, or didn't feel well when he was measured?" -Overboss Shawn Bjornson

"Ah, the Overboss the intelligent brute with a crush on Prince Ellis Mercer, yes? I jest, of course. Anyways, Shawn is interesting character. His take is that of a comic book character with him suddenly born with higher than average intelligence without needing to labour for it. He is quite luck in that regard, and also his society behaving more closer to pirates in their endeavors and having no international pushback do their actions. That are most likely undermining global stability. Although I suppose that is because his targets are not very significant and would be preferred such as North Korea to be taken off the map. Before they end up doing something real nasty. Overall, my stance is positive.”

Oswald's Status: Alive and well until 1968

My personal thoughts concerning 'Gwen Tracer'

"I feel like a fool to not mention her heroic acts way before; this 'Tracer', as many people would know her for her ability to travel different worlds, deserves more recognition for her efforts to free the people from that terrible place they call 'Auschwitz'. And I read here that Auschwitz was run by a group they call the 'Nazis' (a gang of criminals and gangsters I assume) and she helped overthrow these murderers and free the whole camp from their oppression. And she did this for the daughters who were sent away by their parents to a much safer part of the world, and to return to that place in order to free them, and all the people there no matter how high the risks, she deserves a place in the hall of heroes in history."

"And heroes like her will be remembered fondly and never forgotten in the memories of the people she saved and the future generations of those survivors."
-His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Imperial Fatherland, Oswald I

But Oswald failed to realize is the entire history of the Nazis and their involvement in the Holocaust in the real world, and if he were to read more about Nazi Germany, Adolf Hitler and his goons, their involvement in World War Two and the many atrocities committed in both the war itself and the Holocaust, he's going to be disappointed in himself and depressed to not see the big picture
