Carl's Mood: Professional

"Winter? Fitting moniker if you ask me, since Edwin's demeanor appears to be colder than an ice storm in January. I've always said conformity is a dish best served at absolute zero, and Enceladus is living evidence. Not that I'm challenging Edwin's motives; he's obviously a very capable middle-manager who was willingly kicked upstairs, and instead of crashing and burning, proceeded to consolidate his power and gain more influence than he'll probably ever require. So bravo. But even as idealistic as his ironclad doctrine has become, I worry about his remaining free will. This is a man whose thoughts have been indoctrinated and manufactured from day one in the spirit of the Emperor's shadow, and when anyone, protector of Project PARADISE or not, acquiesces to the unquestioned directives of another man, it sets a very dangerous precedence."

"I'll admit, this is probably the first time in a while that I've seen someone so genuinely qualified in the position to be governing such crucial activities. His veritable immunity to emotional deception and similar stratagems represent remarkable intelligence and professional restraint in my opinion, and I'm not ashamed to say that I'm impressed with what he's been able to achieve given his training. He's a perfect officer. There's no doubt about it. I just hope that someday, Enceladus receives the retirement he so very obviously deserves, and not just for his sake either. Let's face it, when you've got a competent lieutenant like Edwin on payroll, the boss better hope he's treated well, because I know I wouldn't want to somehow cross this guy."

"Carl seems to be very dedicated to his job, which isn't necessarily a bad thing, but to the extent that Carl has, it can become a very serious flaw. Honestly, he doesn't seem that bad until you start hearing of his shady handling of workers who want to unionise. Who does Carl, or for that matter Wondermart, think he is that he can fire people for wanting to unionise. It is the inherent birthright of all the workers of the world to unionise and anyone who tries to prevent that needs to be taken out of power. Carl needs to grow some balls and stand up for his workers, he needs to organise a store-wide strike to force Wondermart to allow their workers to unionise, that is if he truly cares for his workers. Otherwise, he is just another power-hungry, cowardly manager just looking out for himself, rather than truly caring for his workers."

"If I am to conduct business with Principality of Japan, I am gonna have to choose one of the brothers. Because due to the intrigues, and punchout in the end, it's near impossible to please them both. One of them, Jiro is pretty much uptight conservative. Not every of them can overlook our way of life and conduct business with us. the other, Chikao is a rather fanatic progressive reformist, who went a lil' bit too far in his good intentions. False accusation of sexual assault... that's a rather nasty thingy. Guess, given my bisexuality, I'll go with supporting Chikao. Jiro won't endorse me. Or, if Jiro endorses, I might try to go with him. Or maybe I could use my charisma to make them brothers again? Rekindle and such? I ain't a family psychologist, but hey, on the other hand I wasn't a professional politician with degree in laws and yet council endorsed me as the leader after doing the Refreshemnt Dance rite of hard challenges. On the third radioactive hand though... Sky Reaver legislation is a rather simplistic one. But to hell with that! I am gonna try this!

This is an interesting challenge, Jiro would be hard to persuade. And association with Chikao, due to his not-so-nice deeds could potentially harm my reputation in Principality of Japan and weaken my position in negotiations. Hmmm... What if I try to gain influence and use it to improve LGBT rights there without interacting with him directly? While using charisma and improve relations option with Jiro. This would satisfy them both. Gotta make a more detailed plan than jsut this draft on a napkin." -Overboss Shawn Bjornson

Melding^[1] on “Shawn Bjornson”

First and foremost, the ontale^[2] of anger and dislike I feel for this man cannot be put to words. However, I would much rather keep my anger to myself and this paper clean and formal.

Here^[3] Bjornson stands as the so-called “Overboss” of an unordered band of thieves, hirelings, and cutthroats calling itself the “Sky Reavers”. However, the weaponry and flytugs^[4] this band keeps in its ownership bring some worry, as is the seeming skill in stride^[5] it holds.

Bjornson, as a man, is tall, strong, and seemingly charismatish as said in his knowledgesheet^[6]; I would say this is rather befitting of his selfbestowed “criger”^[7] title. Notwithstanding his seeming lack of wisdom^[8], this man is knowing in militarish tactics and leadership. As a general, I hold some tweags^[9] about this, but I shall take these words as uttered as to not underguess^[10] the might this man and his band may hold. As for his wight^[11], he is by all means a madman. A “criger” through and through, he knows nothing but fighting, although seems to take upon menish^[12] outswoopings^[13] as can be foreseen^[14] of a man such as himself. His moudiness^[15] is tweagless^[16], that much is true; in a fight, he should be seen leading troops at the forefront. This is a weakness of his, and can be taken foredeal^[17] of.

As a threat, by himself he would be mild, as would any lone man. Leading the so-called “Sky Reavers”, however, is another fraign^[18] wholly; indeed fearsome, it is weak to being shattered from the inside. Forslag^[19]: when seen, weaponry where it could must be righted^[20] at him until killed or wounded greatly enough to be of no sorrow^[21].

That is all.

Too often soldiers will intentionally prosecute war far beyond reasonable means because their pride blinds them. That part of him I can respect, though there is little else. Besides, it's part of a commander's job to send soldiers to their possible deaths, getting attached makes that harder and the losses weigh more. Still he seems a very

"I remember Najarala leaving her opinion on me a while back. i can understand her reasons for caution, however she need not be concerned with my intentions. I have already been through enough low points in my lifetime so far to not have shifts in leadership behaviour. People look for leaders who stick to their ideologies and not be swayed by changes in events. Besides, I actually have much better relationships with reptile species... Anyway, I can see that Najarala is a very militaristic type of leader, focusing heavily on keeping discipline as strict as possible in order to quash any form of insubordination... Eating her own to punishment them, however? that's uh... kind of frightening, but most likely a very effective deterrent... i have to wonder if she would consider having surgery to enhance her sight so that she would no longer be blind. Whether or not she would think of such as a weakness, it would greatly improve her ranged combat effectiveness. Overall, aside from her extreme methods of punishment (I've never agreed with the idea of killing my own unless it was a split decision with little to no other option), i can easily respect her for her efficiency. My views are fairly positive."

Talon Haydn Lincoln Taal Reynolds Fang Wu Ying](#): My evaluation on Exarch Sera first and foremost. The other Valentians have definitely encountered her, and talked all the praises and wonders, and I am very inclined to agree. On the first glimpse of her dossier, she is very much an embodiment of someone who has elegance in her soul, and wants to make the world around her a better place. Her childhood and her early years were nonexistent, but that does not negative impact my opinions on her. For someone who lives for many eternities, and to live for more, these kinds of things were not very relevant, anyway. On the topic of her powers, they were very astronomical - literally speaking. The ability to absorb a neutron star - one of the densest and most dangerous objects out there in the universe - without any problems, is astounding. With your permission, I do would like to ask how you accomplished such a feat - for science, of course! I am positive with you, of course, there is no doubt about that. I wish you good health and to live for many eternities to come - I know you will live anyway, but there is a difference between just living, and living with contentment.

Lightning at her disposal as well? i like lightning, a good jolt is nice for a wake up when i'm feeling rather sluggish which as of late seems to be a common state for me. Her personality that of someone who is no-nonsense, at least in Shogun form, her true self, Ei seems to be a lot more approachable on more relaxed terms. I have to wonder how easy it would be to reach Ei, as i would like to get to know more about her since she has lived through centuries, and a bit of knowledge sharing may benefit us both. Maybe i could help her cope easiers with losses, since i have been through enough of that myself to eventually accept it as part of life. Overall, my views are fairly positive. Princess-Sovereign of Hyrule, Zelda

"Good day to you, your majesty Raiden Shogun... I would assume that you call yourself something different in a less formal and more private time, however the title of which you refer yourself to is. Catchy, in a way. It is good to see that your realm is blessed by those who are higher than us, much like Hyrule. Naturally, it shows the commitment of their responsibilities and good that they wish to show the lower people have not become null... By any means, it seems that like myself, your goddess, you call her Raiden Ei has had a personal impact, providing great strengths and the natural justification of rule.

Nevertheless, I feel it necessary to proclaim that I simply can not understand your wishes to act as anything beyond a puppet figure for this being, the Raiden Ei... I have great respect for Hylia and her deeds, and as a conduit of sorts of our goddess' power and influence I must try to commit to her ideals, however I believe it important to be your own person. Even with the higher powers governing our worlds, it is important to understand that it is you that should govern yourself. For if Goddess Hylia, or in your case Raiden Ei had reason to become untrustworthy of us, I believe that we would have never been in the first place.

This is why I must provide you, Raiden Shogun my condolences for thinking that you are nothing else but that conduit... I do not doubt Goddess Raiden Ei's benevolence if she is anything like Hylia, so please do not read what I say as an attack against her benevolence. I am sure that Raiden Ei may indeed understand what I say, as I believe that our own Goddess does indeed as well.

To continue, though I could never see myself be the same way... That role is more so delegated to their honours Guard-Commander Ilu and Knight-General Alcalph, I understand that your stoicism and outwards show of being expressionless may prove greatly useful in the managing of your realm, but nevertheless it seems to have been mentioned that this show of emotional power does not allow you to resist the commands of others. Please remember that you have been trusted by the gods and goddesses themselves to rule your realm, allow this to be the justification for your sole rule. Others may simply try to sabotage, either intentionally or unintentionally the good that you may be able to perform for your people...

I have high regard for you, oh great Raiden Shogun. However, my points above still stands... Please do not feel afraid to be your own person and express yourself in that way. The influence of both your realm's peoples and goddess Raiden Ei should not allow that to cease. Listen, yet do not allow yourself to be dominated by the powers that be, it is simply the most sane way to govern yourself, I promise...

Until we meet again, your majesty... It has been a pleasure..."

Prince Ralis, of Zora's Domain

"Gods above! I apologise for this, your grace... Oh, wait. You call yourself an Exarch? I... I'm sorry, but what is that supposed to mean? Anyways, Exarch Sera, I did not expect you to look the way you do! I haven't seen a creature in our shared realm, the one that the Hylians call... Well, Hyrule that looks quite like you. I suppose the closest is either us Zora, or perhaps the Lizalfos, but nevertheless I mean no offense from that! It was just...

Surprising to see you!

Sure, you look a little strange to me, but it seems your physical... Well, body isn't even the most interesting part
about you!
So... You come
from..
Somewhere? I couldn't decipher where this
"Somewhere"
could possibly be, but you wield the power of Gods, Goddesses and deities! It would be quite blasphemous to call you more powerful than Goddess Hylia,
but in all honesty, I don't think I could even fathom
the power you may have. And with this power, you have proven
time and time again that you are plenty more... Well, present? Is that the correct word? Than Hylia, for instance...
Where she silently guides our world and universe moreso
like a nameless power, though of course she does have a name, just a rather hopeless way of explaining her ways, you have physically and clearly managed,
affected and, as later on in your life continuing

even now,
governed
places, people
and...
Nevermind.
I have to wonder... Why?
I hold the belief, so forgive me for this, that the silent influence of a deity for a world is probably better off for everyone
than physical management and overt influence...
After all, that's what the great powers of the Twilight Realm
attempted not half a decade ago, and the constant meddling of Denise over our humble realm,
and it's very much safe to say that... Well, they always have less than benevolent intentions! Take you, for example. I have little to criticize about you, for even though you affect the places you influence in a different way,
there isn't too
much proof that you are anything less than benevolent.
But, mind if I point out the fact that, even if you provided the people a better life than they may of had before, you did abduct a group of people from their homeworld. I'm not sure about this, but did you give the people much heed to their beliefs? National pride can be quite powerful, for instance, perhaps some of those people may have wanted to stay for that reason alone, though there could be more... As I said, I'm not arguing that your intentions were anything less than... Well, good. But, that whole thing was a... Little on the nose, yes?

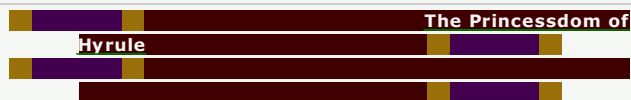

I, for one am glad to see that what is pretty much your status as, at the very least a de facto deity hasn't stopped you from being as humble as any common person! You have your own views, on economy, on society and the such like any commoner, like even me. Sera, it is great to see that you respect mortality to the point that you wish to experience it rather than not... And though you wield darkness, like the awful Twilight, you seem to have control over it and refuse to use it for anything less than holy reasons.

What am I saying, here? Well, to put it simply, you are a character that is worth laud, and praise I wish to give you, even with a hiccup or two. And, to finalize, it has been a pleasure to meet someone like you!"

BN, please provide an opinion on the Princess-Sovereign of Hyrule, Zelda, as... Well, that is the character that I intended a response to... I just had to provide for Platinia, and I did that with Ralis...

The Princessdom of Hyrule. A fanfiction based on the Legend of Zelda :: Twilight Princess that takes place half a decade after the conclusion of the game. A new caste of Hyruleans, no less the newly built army resent the old Guard and Princess-Sovereign Zelda for the surrender of the realm to the Twilight and the weakness of Hyrule from invasion...

Meanwhile, the Zora worry greatly about the militarization of Hyrule, and the Goron less so due to the Economic stranglehold of the Rupee of which they have as leverage.

Never again shall Hyrule fall, and never again shall we sully the name of Hylia under our weakness!

AN:

"I can't say whether this guy is good or bad, he sounds a bit shady in some aspects though alike oh I don't know, effectively turning the country into a one-party state though admittedly, I have seen far worse leaders and I have done worse things than him."

Hyrule because they need a good post

"Ok Zelda, we may have met before, or did someone else in my cabinet met you? Idk but as a leader I do appreciate how you are not all about the honor but instead support more practical solutions to your problems like surrendering yourself to the enemy which did end well in the long run, that's what matters after all. The military is pissed at you and I suggest making peace with them but I'd also say that they need to chill.

However due to the let just say difference in technology and social standards, I can't comment on how competent you actually are in developing hyrule. Problems like poverty, racism, class struggle, infrastructure and GDP stats aren't relevant in your place. Like why would I even suggest building a high speed rail line between Hyrule and Zora's domain? Yeah you don't even know what that thing is.

Ignoring politics, we really should go on a trail ride together, me, Daikan, you and I believe you have a well-decorated white horse. You know, explore Hyrule together, I've met the fish guy in Zora's domain before and that place is beautiful."
