I love you Post-Rock.

It's rooted in the technicality and soul of emo (that breakdown that starts at around 5:00 is very emo-ish, while of course retaining a post-rock atmosphere).

So, I do seem to like some Emo music:) I just don't appear to like the genre as a whole.

I've enjoyed what I've heard of Of Monsters and Men, so I'll give it a look. Iceland does have a good range of talent for such a relatively small country. I'd like to go there someday, and I love their language (being interested in linguistics and all). I'm sure you'll like Rökkurró (if you haven't heard 'em already).

It's completely different then Of Monsters and Men, so I'm proud of that band for liking completely different music from themselves as well:) And yeah it does. I know like, almost 10 bands from Iceland that I like now, that are usually unique in some way, or have a lot of variety on their albums and are good in that regard. Sigur Ros, Mum, Of Monsters and Men, Bjork, For A Minor Reflection, Agent Fresco, Olafur Arnolds, Johann Johannsson, STAFRAEN HAKON, Amiina, Daniel Agust, and possibly others I'm not thinking about. In a country of 300,000 people, there seems to be a lot of creativity. From what I've seen as well, they seem like a relatively mellow people.

I want to go to Iceland too, and thanks to Sigur Ros, I got into their music and country. And I'm a very chill, mellow person, so very chill, mellow people is so up my alley. And going through some of their amazing scenery and waterfalls (They have a LOT of waterfalls), like this, has made me want to go even more, being the nature lover I am. Along with the fact that, instead of bailing out their bankers, they apparently freaking arrested their bankers and now their economy is one of the fastest growing in the world right now.

And I like that song. Never heard those guys before. I'm glad some Icelandic bands still sing in Icelandic as well, because their language sounds awesome.

I'm totally digging this alright. Thanks, Corrian.

girl in the bubble, lisa ray furikawa (which i think is a cover, and it reminds me of a scene in some anime i once saw that i don't remember then name of or when or where i saw it) also i think she may have released an album with it on it, but i don't know the name of the album if she did. it was one of the free samples on her website. a number of years ago now. she performed several at sac-anime who's site i followed the link from by which i discovered her's) other favorites of her's i have include small soul and ah, that one about the blade of a mage warrior, i forget for sure the name of, which is absolutely fantastic. she also did a version of tennessee waltz, sung in japanese.

This guy does an amazing job at challenging himself vocally, considering how freaking different this song is from some that I have posted. Which is brilliant, instead of never challenging yourself at all.
