Their current Emperor is a hard-line militarist who came to power through a coup against his more reformist predecessor with help from disgruntled military elements. He is also very attractive and charismatic like his mythical namesake.

Partially inspired by the Third Odyssey mod for EU4, this nation is essentially a Byzantine successor state in South America that has fused together Ancient Greek Religion with Greek Orthodox Christianity. It mixes the aesthetic of Byzantium and Ancient Greece, with very open and liberal social values but with an Imperial Monarchy. NS stats are referenced but are not strictly followed to a T.

To make a long paragraph short, the Swedish Empire and the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth both existed as a Great Power until the 20th century, they fought alongside the Holy Roman Empire in their timeline's Great War... and they lost; resulting in the establishment of a republic in Sweden and much of the PLC, a giant civil war in the HRE that resulted in the creation of their timeline's USSR (The Spartacist Union), and a gigantic Empire of Trebizond. Wow, it appears the objectively bad side wins the Great War in every timeline.

Corindia's history dates back to 900 AD, where a group of colonizers known as the 'Iza', who would go on to now be called 'Hacopare peoples', first arrived to the islands that form the modern-day territory of Corindia.

In recent times, there has been a growing schism between the conservative old guards under PI Kiroshita Umezu and the growing progressive momentum under Empress Hotaru III. The 16 year-old Empress, influenced by her mother's conversion to a minority religion, holds a modern progressive point of view that directly challenges Kiroshita's tough and hardline positions, as shown by her policies in crime and immigration. As time marches to the Empress' 18th birthday - where she will be granted full responsibilities - a dramatic shift is set to shake the status quo of the Matriarchy, if not the whole Sphere.

I don't know why their Emperor would be a descendant of both the Romanov and Rurik dynasties and only have "limited knowledge of Russian", unless these names were just given to him for fun. Also, they don't seem to practice primogeniture, like almost every other monarchy does, since Edward here is the "youngest child" of the former Emperor. Why the Tudor coat of arms is part of his own is also beyond me.

I am delighted to see a fellow member of Royalty who has had a couple of years in the armed forces under their belt, doing actual service in the military when compared to members of other Royal Families.

While I admit that I may not have had as glorious record in Royal Cassadian Air Force when compared to your during your tenure in the Navy. I was deployed for a year, to the sometimes-volatile border between our overseas province of New Carthage [OOC: former brasilistan] and the Kingdom Of EJORIKE. There my squadron had to regularly intercept the jets of the EJORIKEAN Air Force, that violated our airspace, quite deliberately on the orders of some of their blowhard commanding officers.

On two occasions these encounters turned hostile when our sensors detected that they were trying to "lock on", which forced us to adopt a hostile behaviour in return.

All in all, in both of these encounters we shot down the intruders out of the sky - during which, I in both engagements managed to shoot down a total of three "boggies", something that fills me with great sense of pride, knowing I served to defend my country.

Hope we meet each other in person one day.
