It is a State Socialist federation taking up all of East and Southeast Asia, divided into 9 Soviet states, run by the Asian Communist Party, and heavily influenced by Filipino, Chinese, and North Korean culture and sociopolitical systems. Philosophy emphasizes Asian solidarity against the West, akin to the rhetoric of Imperial Japan's so-called "Co-Prosperity Sphere." Eugenics is practiced. The capital is in Manila in New Philippines, but the largest city is Victory City in Burma/New Myanmar with over 14 million people.

Also, they have the Sakuradite from Code Geass as a power source.

Their world descended into chaos due to a catadysmic event during which random human beings gained supernatural powers. These humans became known as Conduits, and one of them rules the AN, having leveraged his powers to capture the immediate territories surrounding his home state and proclaiming himself as emperor in the ensuing conflict.

The Yeglan Islands were originally part of a bigger island that encompassed all of them. This Island was sunk during an earthquake, leaving only the islands that compose the Yeglan Islands afloat. For most of the history of the Islands, they were controlled by nearby nations, with wars for the control of these islands happening often.

A lot of the flags of the new world appear to be based off pre-extinction flags, what with Vealia being based off the nation their Republic is based on and Cesea being suspiciously similar to the PRC (who inhabited their lands long before they came).

The only exception to this rule seems to be the most powerful of the superpowers, Inkopolitia. They appear to be completely unique with no pre-extinction nation to base their government, culture, or even flag on.

Honestly, the whole thing is a pretty interesting variant of the Splatoon game. Which I did not think could be made into a world with such depressing lore.

Their army is quite small, and mostly serves as a deterrence against the uncivilized tribes that surround them. However, they can call up greater numbers in the event of an invasion.

Teiensi is a small city-state on islands located south-west of Japan. It was a former colony of the United Kingdom until 1952 (and was occupied by Imperial Japan during WWII), and is a highly democratic parliamentary republic today, with lots of new urban development, skyscrapers, and an extensive public transport system. Major industries and services include finance, electronics, and IT.

Actually, they were purchased from Spain in 1884 and 1899, not conquered from Germany in the 1910s. And it's always been called Mikuronesia (with a mee-) in the Hatsunese (i.e. Japanese) language ever since "Micronesia" was coined, that's just the transliteration.

The second world war was an absolute disaster for Bastarnia, costing them a third of their entire population and half its economic resources. What's worse, after the war they were reorganized into a Soviet Republic (which means that this continued to go on until the dissolution of the Union more than half a decade later). Three years after the dissolution of the Soviet Union, they restored the monarchy which is a rarity for post-Soviet states.
