Ah yes, Comrade Borzywoj... I suppose there not to exist a singular person who I both despise and look up to in so many different ways. For instance- with all honesty I cannot agree with you in terms of colonialism. Isn't it up to the strongest of the nations to bring up the less fortunate ones upwards, to bring the, civilization or, if they reject these gifts to at least use them as a resource "oil well"... However, what truly makes me wish you nothing short of a slow and painful death is your mistreatment of Germans. While indeed, there is no German blood in my veins, I was raised and taught by Prussians,,amongst other people and your mistreatment of our volk is not something I'm going to tolerate. Yet still, while o despise your ideas, I see that you are a man of honor, truly pursuing his views. Same am I- and as such I'd like to challenge you to a duel- may the strongest win and die a death, worthy of a nobleman, of a Royal, of a warrior!

Viktoria Louise:
"The so-called "President" Viktoria is nothing but an oddity. An oddity of history and geopolitics. A Hohenzollern but a President? And a Social-democrat and Agnostic to boot? All the qualities that are unbecoming of a Hohenzollern and a woman her stature. It may seem the Germans have changed for the better under her ever since the days of the Mad Huns (1939 - 1945) but do not be mistaken, they remain the lynchpin of Europe and their tactics have merely changed to ensure German hegemony. However, this is a welcomed change for us in Argentina and Europe as a whole as long as they are not the Mad Huns. And if she plays her cards right then maybe she'll go down in history as the second "Duchess Louise" of Napoleonic times."

"I remember these children. Are they still lording over their school, after all this time? Or was it just their classroom... either way, I find it rather incredible they have managed to safeguard their independence this long, as usually the world of adults puts a stop to this sort of thing before it can even reach this stage. I find myself agreeing more with Jojo and Engelford. Though Jojo's limited experience with politics may do her a disservice, it also gives her a sort of idealism based on common decency that you are not likely to find in more jaded folk. Freddy's socialist views may not completely align with my personal beliefs, but he seeks to dismantle oppressive hierarchies with the well-being of the common person as his first concern. The system he wishes to instate in their stead would apparently not even resemble a state, but have all issues solved by referendum, something that may ultimately ideal for such a very, very small society as the one he has helped create. They both in the end see that at least some structure in society is necessary for it to remain functional, something that is certainly true of humanity with its unfortunately self-destructive tendencies. Francine, on the other hand, advocates for an end to formal communities and authorities of all sorts, and it seems that she may actually embrace humanities combative and destructive tendencies. Ultimately, though, the three of them all have remarkably well-developed ideals for such young humans, and will likely become great leaders in the future. As silly as it makes me feel, I think I will say I fully support this society of students, and look forward to seeing where it goes, even if their teachers wouldn't approve. I think being a bit friendly to everyone is possible but if you want to strengthen relations even more you gotta pick your side, though it's probably better to be safe for now and see how things goes. Anyway you should build more railroads than normal roads since they are better at moving more people and goods and if you electrify then they are the most environmentally friendly method of transport, 2 sets of tracks can carry more people than an 8 lane freeway and her "hobby" of meditation makes sure that she has a clear mind to lead the nation. High Princess Reissechi Yuri

"San Horo! You are an opportunist! A revisionist! A disgrace to Mao Zedong and to Maoism!

You are a disgrace everytime you mince the words of Chairman Mao Zedong while driving your luxurious Toyota Alphard car. Chairman Mao Zedong said "Serve the people"! Perhaps the meaning of "serving the people" is buying a Toyota Alphard car and spending money on cars and sportscars! I have heard that the public transport in Sherechia are fairly cheap and accessible and one can just as well

ride in a bus
or in a train,
than in a
Toyota Alphard
car.

A smokescreen for opportunism in the bourgeois parliamentary arena. What exactly is the point of running in the elections and trying to gather votes?
Are you sure that your own party is not filled of careerists and opportunists
who use
"Maoism" as a smokescreen
for a well-
paying position? While you flash your so-called
"handsome"
face and stride
and walk around like a handsome
Chinese actor
with a flashy and a charismatic smile? How
"revolutionary"!

We are disappointed in our
"comrades" in Sherechia. And
we have informed the secretary of the Sherechian
Red Guards
that no aid or support, even in moral terms
or token shows of support would come from the National Weijyahowr of Faeries (Feyris
Communist Party) of Feyrissire as long as we are not convinced that the

Sherechian Red Guards is not entrenched in revisionism or is full of careerists and opportunists.

Until then, so be it
"Comrade"!

Regent of the Zora, Avau

"I shall admit that to go forward, this may seem an unorthodox way as to introduce myself to the topic of which this may entail, nevertheless as to allow the promptness at to heighten the point of which I will make, I make no apologies going forward...

I have keenly studied the information of which is provided on her highness Reissechi Yuri, and in addition have taken additional time to read on the one of whom she had responded to beforehand, sir San Horo... As I have read, the latter is a person of which I have plenty more praise for than the former, and in what I shall review going forward, I believe for you, madam Yuri that you may be the least qualified people as to criticize mister Horo.

As to explain as to why I make such a comment, allow me to judge your character and your actions, your highness...

To begin with, though you had been offered the guidance of parentage, though the status of which you and they had originally, as farmers down on their luck in comparison to the others of your realm, I believe myself correct that your character had done little to allow the influence of your parents to guide you away from the reprehensible being of which you are now. It is shameful as to how you had developed, for it had seemed that without the influence of your current compatriots within this "Communist Party of Feyrisshire" that had been forced upon yourself during the years of higher education, you may have come to have a normal and stable life. For in university, you had been indoctrinated and forced messages of which your own mind could not resist by the aforementioned group, to an unfortunate point of which did not allow yourself to formulate one's own opinion on the situation of the realm and the people of which you inhibit. As the such, I apologise that the such would have had to happen, for all deserve a chance to develop their own mind, notably so opinions on the world around themselves. Nevertheless, considering of the way you had exploited your compatriots to eventually become Princess-Sovereign, I am unsure if such a story is moreso a ploy as to hide more nefarious intent as to why you had wished a placement within the Communist Party of Feyrisshire.

For here is how we differ, madam.. I had only taken a position of power
within the Domain
when it had been necessitated. I had no selfish or ill
intent in doing so,
for I had the interest in the continued stability of the Zora in a time of turmoil, where no other had been willing, nor had the idea to take the place of which I had. From the understanding of which I have gathered, you had aspired for the position since this "university" and had made numerous,
deceitful and damaging ploys to eventually have overthrown the previous Princess-Sovereign with the fellow members of the Holy Quintet, during a time of which had not necessitated such action through crisis or turmoil.

As for the current day, your rule had been the opposite of beneficial for the people of which are underneath you, for you had and continue to brutally repress any opinion that is not you and your compatriot's own, to the point of physical violence. In addition, you have done little but regress progressive ideals and damage
the society of which you now control with an iron grip. As such, I misunderstand as to how your rule could be justified... I see much comparison
between yourself,
and the horrid King of Twilight of whom had invaded our world not half a decade ago. And a similar person you seem to be with your own namesake, for the surname of which you hold, that being Yuri allows myself to cast my mind to a tyrant of whom I have keenly heard of from certain contacts.

I must only hope that your people are scheming against yourself, oh Princess-Sovereign... For your horrid rule will need to end, much as the Twilight King's had by the forces of Hyrule and the Hero of Courage.

Let us not meet again."

BN, here is a link to The Regent of the Zora's factbook.

The Princessdom of Hyrule. A fanfiction based on the Legend of Zelda :: Twilight Princess that takes place half a decade after the conclusion of the game. A new caste of Hyruleans, no less the newly built army resent the old Guard and Princess-Sovereign Zelda for the surrender of the realm to the Twilight and the weakness of Hyrule from invasion...

Meanwhile, the Zora worry greatly about the militarization of Hyrule, and the Goron less so due to the Economic stranglehold of the Rupee of which they have as leverage.

"Alright, next file! Well, this's a thick one. Who've we got here Greg? The Regent of Zora? Well, for this one I'll have to go ahead and read through it... Well, I suppose I'll begin then. Regent Avavu, in the shortest possible terms, is probably the best qualified leader in her kingdom. A hundred sixty eight years naturally gives way to experience, especially with the bizarre events she's lived through. She's seen the, suspension of time, disappearance of her god, invasions, freezing thawing... Quite the lifetime. I'm struggling to put it all together concisely, there's quite a bit here. I'll leave off by saying that the Prince should allow Regent Avavu a little more influence, as she's certainly capable of maintaining the kingdom"

"By Hylia, it's been a little while since I've allowed myself to have a little look around this place, hasn't it? Got to admit, it's always quite exciting to return here, see what strange, wonderful... Terrible people may be lurking, to see them all reacting to each other. And now, I'm going to join again! Why? Because I've got free time and this might honestly be better for me to do than just... Sit around, in the Domain. Maybe eat some fish, maybe go for a little swim, you get my point.

Okay, so... Oh. I see. So, I've talked about one of the person's guardsmen before here, I can't forget a person like Anatoly, can I now? And now, I guess it's time to see what's up with his superior, right? I mean, when I saw mentions of Anatoly's boss in his own description, I can't help but think that she might be a little... Worse for wear.

So, you're called Yunru, huh? Cool, I've finally put a name to Anatoly's boss now, that's good. I'm not sure right now why you feel like you can't reveal what you look like, perhaps there's a good reason. Oh, and let's not forget, as expected, you lead the group of which yourself and, of course Anatoly are a part of, it's called the Paramilitary of Foehn, correct? Uhm, so what exactly is a paramilitary anyway? I mean, I think I get what a military is, it's like a fancy word for a guard, like the Zora Guard! But I'm not sure what the whole "para" part of that means, honestly. But, I should probably move on before I get caught up in a whole bunch of semantics.

So, I see that your life hasn't really been mentioned, as in... Your youth, I meant. It just kind of skips to when you finish your "studies", whatever those involved. And then you'd have gone on to "Theorize and develop possible weapons" for the Chinese? I would ask who the "Chinese" are, but realistically I'm not sure you'd even know what Hyrule is, so I guess we're both in the dark. So, you'd have done all this in a place called Kashmir, but then a certain "Epsilon" group decides to come over and ruin all of that for you? Or was it Russia instead? I don't know, but Russia = Russia, am I right? Anyways, I understand how it feels to have your life turned upside down in a heartbeat. I know, I had like. A minute warning of the Twilight, and all it really took was perhaps five minutes from being an innocent, yet happy person to... Well, watching dear mother's... Life be snuffed away by Zant's most cruel hands...

There's a special place in Demise's horrid grasp for the Twilight King's afterlife, though now that I mention it, he might blooming enjoy that!

Prince of the Zora, Ralis

Sorry for the diversion, that hit home... So yeah, I very much sympathise with you... So then, you'd be quickly commanded to return to the "homeland" by your superiors, but you'd come up with your own idea instead, right? You wanted to simply escape and make a new place or something, away from the chaos of the "Mental Omega war", whatever that is... You wanted to go west, but I guess your fellow people sticking by you said to instead go east, and you agreed. I mean, I guess that a random, frozen place on the edge of the world might just be safer than whatever "West" meant in your context, but hey! I can't say for sure.

Now, I could recite literally everything that happened during your trip through "Siberia", but I'll refrain, yes? I will mention the encounter you had with those bandits, the ones who claimed that they pretty much worshipped "Great Yuri" or whatever, threatening your lives over your belongings?..

...Okay, so reading a little further, I can safely say may those guys get what's coming to them! It's like, they began the process that transformed you into who you are now, though I'll get to that in a bit.

You and friends, including Anatoly by that point boarded a boat, right? Though I mean, you said you were within a container within that boat. Sounds like a tight squeeze, alright! Anyways, aboard you found out about the "MCV", which later you'd find out can... Wait a minute, can build structures... Out of thin air with little more than some strange yellow liquid and random support beams that seemed to have come from nowhere?.. Uhm, what? So, I've heard of like, machines before, things that need no labour from people like you or me to automatically do stuff, but the closest example of that here is like, a statue moving a couple of inches... I guess the most impressive that I know of is this rumour from the other Zora, that within the Lakebed Temple there's this entire contraption that can move entire sets of staircases from one location to another! So, I don't even know how that happens, let alone your contraption that you found!

Anyways, you'd put this MCV to good use, I see? Building an entire place deep within a frozen land called "Alaska"... Hmm, creative name! We literally call the frozen places to the right of the Domain "Snowpeak", so at least your world's got some originality to it. Oh, and I forgot to mention, you called your little village the "Bastion", right? Alright then.

This is where we get to the modern day of your realm, Yunru. So, in the "Bastion" you'd toil and tear and work and break yourself mentally, and honestly I'm surprised not even physically in pursuing your only goal, the safety of the Bastion and what you call the Foehn Paramilitary... When I read how far you go, like how you sacrifice literal sleep to work instead, how you take safety so seriously that you literally kill people who mock you and pillock around with playing with your problems. I mean, yeah that is a bit of a crap move, but your response is like, one hundred times worse. Anyways, I lost track. So, literally your work has caused your life to become literally nothing else... I know you do so out of your own volition, even quoting that "We are all cogs in the machine to fulfil a goal" or whatever, but you realise that you are skin and bone, not metal, right? Like, leave being a machine to the machines, because at the end of the day, your actions are very unhealthy to you! Like seriously, go to sleep! Foehn will not collapse if you catch a few zzzz's.

And if you want me to argue with you in a different way to literally protecting your own livelihood, identity and whatever, let me say that by overworking yourself, you put yourself at risk of biting the big one (I mean dying if you don't understand) really well! Like, you can die without sleep, you know? And having a mind that is weakened by constantly toiling away only provides you with detriment. Who's to say you're going to spot every security flaw, every intention of your "militants", every action that this mysterious Epsilon wishes to take against you when your mind is weak like that?

And also, you've got trusted militants and guard, right? Like Anatoly, for example! You could share out the struggles of command and, just in general work with the people you're comfortable with.

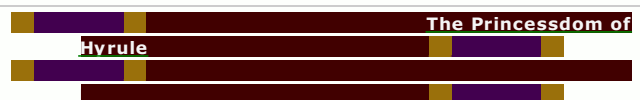

Not sure how anything will convince you, though... You're like, in trouble... Mentally, is what I mean by saying that. Like, there's something wrong with your grey matter, Yunru! Those knives being sharpened aren't actually a thing, don't ask how I know about it. After all, it's not like the MCV is a kitchen, right? It's your mind pretending that you can hear it... I would say go see someone who knows about mental deficiencies, but I mean... I don't think there's anyone in the Bastion with those kinda skills, so that kinda goes out of the window!

Anyways, now I'm regretting returning to this. Yunru, I'm not going to lie, your own experiences and personality pretty much radiates a depressive haze, it's that bad... Plus, the... Scar of the Twilight Crisis that I try to seal away has been opened again. Don't blame yourself though, I decided to read this so uhm. Bad me, I guess? The most I can say is, I hope it gets better for you, Yunru... May Hylia and friends, not to mention Anatoly's god help you return yourself to some sense of normalcy... Goodbye for now."

Right, okay BN... Here's a lil' link to Prince Ralis' factbook.

(Since I've put 1,400 words into my post, I'm hoping that at the very least, the response I get is more than a paragraph, at the very least... Or rather, isn't a summerpost.)

The Princessdom of Hyrule. A fanfiction based on the Legend of Zelda :: Twilight Princess that takes place half a decade after the conclusion of the game. A new caste of Hyruleans, no less the newly built army resent the old Guard and Princess-Sovereign Zelda for the surrender of the realm to the Twilight and the weakness of Hyrule from invasion...

Meanwhile, the Zora worry greatly about the militarization of Hyrule, and the Goron less so due to the Economic stranglehold of the Rupee of which they have as leverage.

[cough] While I haven't had much to say about anyone in general, mostly due to bloated articles and at times irrelevant information chucked in (more so referring to national history than the leader's own life) this is a welcome change... Somewhat. Still, let's just... Get this over with. Short, stout, yet they speak volumes to their people, trying to rightfully guide them as their moral compass to some extent... Even if they are a little "soft" on action unless it's dire and immediate. They managed to recover a nation ravaged by a uh... Crisis? Yea. Rebuilding and reuniting the people... I mean, they are friendly I guess? Just that their seemingly pacifist views clash with the survival of a nation, even if they DO have a capable military with more emphasis on diplomacy than brinkmanship. But it's interesting... Even if I feel that they should lean harder on more assertive actions to help prevent future disasters, be it from within or outside their country. Empire. Thing. Bleh.

"This is the most facetious, shallow, childish excuse for a leader I have had the misfortune of having to opine on for the benefit of this place. Perhaps there is some merit to the things she does in her nation, but they are phrased in this... grating tone. It lends her no charisma. There is nothing to her as a person, nothing to carve into the totem that her people must follow, other than this bland list of bullet-points meant to comprise a political agenda. There is no blood in her veins, only water. She is passionless. Do not waste my time with this sort of thing again."

"Alright, let's look through this next one. Who've we got? Man that's a long name... Ah, I see it. Superintendent Clarissa. Let me just read through the file for a moment...

Well, Clarissa has quite the life story. I'd say she's quite lucky, her original programmers gave her a much better life than what I'd expect. And the same could be said for her experience out of her dimension. She's especially lucky to've landed in Valentijn's home dimension, despite all the nuclear war. Everything about her story is heartwarming like that. I'd say Clarissa is one of the kindest individuals I've read through, despite her hardships. She's certainly got my respect."
