Roman Bird Dog, Melvins.

i fukken love this album

we, unlike the bourgeoisie, have nothing to lose and therefore our expression will be the only honest one, our words will be the only challenging ones and our art will be the one revolutionary expression. We need new noise and new voices and new canvases to become something more than the last poets of a useless generation.

Don't believe it when they say they're trying to save us. Why would they bother? They've got exactly what they want exactly where they want it.

Wut?

If you mean you are disappointed, I've heard that quite a lot with the new Muse, so yeah. I'm glad to see them continuing to evolve. And that the Dubstep part is PLAYED ON INSTRUMENTS, and not on computer. I'm looking forward to checking out their new album.

People are seriously complaining about this album? LOL. What fools. Obviously these people don't understand the creative shift forward in Muse's musical direction. A direction which just so happens to parallel the way popular electronic music is going, but honestly guys, it's just a coincidence.

So far the only track I've heard from this album is "The 2nd Law: Unsustainable". And oh boy, what a track it is! The song starts with this string arrangement. To the untrained ear it may sound as blandly produced as stock music used in commercials, but this is obviously ironic. Muse knows it sounds bland, and the music is actually making a statement about how commercials are really bad and we shouldn't do what they tell us (Muse likes to infuse prolific messages into their work. More to come on this subject). We then hear the sound of a woman talking about the environment. I remember the first time I heard this song it completely warmed my heart because the environment is like really important and stuff and we really need to do something about it. So I was glad Muse was also in support of helping prevent the green house gassing and dangerous pollutions destroying our Earth.

So yeah, this woman is talking about something to do with the environment and then a robot appears and is like UNSUSTAINABLE and then the bass drops, but it isn't actually dubstep. There's this really heavy bassline that sounds exactly like dubstep except it's not actually dubstep because Muse is playing on guitars and not laptops. This is like how jazz isn't jazz when it's played on a guitar instead of a saxophone. I mean come on to everyone saying it's dubstep; how stupid do you guys have to be to think it is? So yeah there's this avant-garde non dubstep section with guitar noises that sounds like dubstep but it's not, but the important thing about this part is that the robot is saying "unsustainable" which is like a really important message about the environment and the green house gassings and pollutings. Muse obviously really care about saving the Earth from the people who are trying to damage it because they included this meaningful message in their song.

Now a lot of people have been criticizing the band for preaching environmental messages whilst being rich celebrities that don't give any of their massive income to supporting sustainable energy or anything like that, but this is actually wrong. My friend went past Matt Bellamy's house once and apparently he had a solar panel on his roof because he cares about the environment so much, so suck on that Muse-haters!

Overall this is definitely going to be the best album of this year and maybe even the best Muse record to date. I am really excited to hear this album in full.

Go Muse!
