For starters, owning sports clubs is already a felony in Laka, punishable by ~10 years of forced labor. We are called communist for a very good reason.

However, attempting to launder money will result in even more serious charges, punishable with up to a death penalty.

Depends on the target of hate. Lakans basically don't care about people preaching for hate if it isn't directed towards largest them. The police may come over and politely ask for the preacher to stop, but as long as it doesn't lead to riots everything is fine. Preaching for riots however can easily warrant a suicide order from local nobility. Yes, telling people to kill themselves here is usual.

Not a crime. Given President McGuire is a pacifist, he'll just not accept it.

AN: It wouldn't be a crime, per se and President Roosevelt had enough history with being ill not to do something this dumb during a pandemic, but if it had happened, the Congress would probably have immediately impeached President Roosevelt.

Depends. If the victim was guilty of a serious crime against innocents such as robbery-murder, rape or paedophilia then no jury would hand out a death sentence for the vigilante killer.

Pray tell, in what world would such a trivial thing be in any way criminal?

What's YN's punishment for misleading authorities by providing false information to an investigation?

Well, if they view any content would also count as an act which would be punished by surgical castration.

Thoughts of the kind would be considered a mental disorder and they would be offered treatment.

Adultery is not criminal, but it is socially taboo.

What's the punishment for accessing government documents (digitally or physically) by illegal means?
