They are the world's largest Italian speaking nation and have a semi-constitutional monarchy led by Emperor Aimone I and Prime Minister Duke of Addis Abeba.

AN:

Nuuk Animism is an umbrella used to describe all traditional beliefs held by the native tribal groups that inhabit Kronova. Most such beliefs center around a combination of ancestor worship and reverence of various animal spirits, such as The Bear, The Elk, and The Rabbit. Much as with Kovac Folk Religion, many of the various Nuuk communities carry on the faith as a part of preserving their culture.

When it comes to architecture, most of them rely on wood, which they harvest from huge tree farms in their nations. Their architects not only have practical use to support the roofs, but also religious as well. Where they talk about the family and the protection of their settlements from the devil.

Their space Navy is quite fast thanks to the use of "jump gates" (which we assume are worm-holes), however they heavily utilize projectile weapons in all of their ships, something which indicates that they're used to very close range engagements...or put the projectiles through wormholes.

Their leader was not born but created at their nation's very first cloning facility from Generic Code #M00201 and Generic Code #F10909.

Superstitions for drinking...

-Shots of alcohol must not be put down partially finished. Individuals are encouraged to finish it in one go, but if they cannot, it must not leave their hand or touch the table until they have finished it. Toasting was thought to attract good spirits, which are bound when one finished the drink. However, if one didn't finish properly, the spell would be broken, and they would fly back off. Toasts must be done with full glasses for all those who are present and drinking.

-Outgoing guests are required to take a "walking" drink or shot, to signify their exit. This was thought to sever their connection to the other guests, meaning they could continue drinking without getting bad luck for not including them.

Their imperial family were the first ones to trade with the Portuguese and were the ones to prevail during the reformist and traditionalist divide after the fall of the republic. They're pretty much the reason why Hinodia is one of the most modernized state in Asia and has even formed royal ties with European dynasties.
