Their body will be desecrated, for all to see, in the public square of the capitol.

Following this, they will be sent to an Orlesian State Prison.

may have had. If they had none (which is most likely) they would additionally be charged with impersonating a medical professional, the punishment for which would, incidentally, also be PuP.

In addition, the guardians who consented to the crime would lose legal guardianship of the patient and would be investigated by the child protective services, potentially losing guardianship of other children in their care.

The exception would be if proof could be given that the patient themselves consented, which would classify the lobotomy as mere black market medicine, and as such they and the patient would simply be given informational pamphlets about the ineffectiveness of lobotomies and other procedures like it.

Probably just a fairly normal sight in some of the smaller villages located throughout the island, though if done in a major city this might draw a few weird glances directed towards you. It's only when the means are especially cruel that nearby officers might act upon you and you end up charged with animal cruelty.

Depends on the motive and severity of the damage.

If it was due to a grudge of some kind against the person, without any intent to harm anyone, it would be treated as destruction of property and they would pay financial compensation to the victim accordingly. If they have a prior record, they may additionally be charged with Prison until Parole (PuP)

If it was with the intent to physically harm another person however, it would likely instead be treated as attempted murder and they would be given PuP even without prior record.

However, if it was for no identifiable reason and instead because of pyromaniac tendencies, they would most likely instead be sent to an asylum to have their condition treated.

Their entire generation will be publicly executed, along with their friends, and their friends' families. Filth such as that does not belong in our nation.

That, and the very idea that this person and their co-conspirators were able to kill every single Orlesian Lion without being killed themselves, defies rationality.

Not actionable during protests, though in certain times, a perpetrator may be charged with a 6400R fine, as well as 1 month of house arrest.
