Naming favorites is difficult for me now. I used to go "Yeah, this and this and this are favorites! (Specifically Radiohead, Eyvind Kang, and Sigur Ros at the time)". Now I do that and go "This is my favorite!", and think of like 5 other bands that might be a favorite as well....sometimes in the same genre. So I think me trying to name favorites now is pointless.

I mean, I can easily say Bjork is my favourite musician and stuff, but that's due to a combination of stuff. But, in terms of songwriting, Antony Hegarty is just absolutely incredible. Such beautiful lyrics.

The J. Arthur Keenes Band - "Water2 (Wetter)"

He's up there in songwriting, probably the best at mixing chipmusic and live instruments and singing.

Don't even know that one yet. I will eventually. The band is pretty interesting. The album I know best is like post-rock, math rock, and electronic music. Then they went even more electronic and the post-rock and guitar work was pushed back even more, but they were still very unique and original.

65daysofstatic-Dance Parties \(Distant\)

Like this is absolutely nothing like the album I know best, and is even a little....dancy.
