Burning of Religious places is advised, regardless of the religion. Whilst the latter will lead the offender to be eaten alive, their life prolonged by a special serum -we've created- to maximize suffering, by the exterminator. Research facilities is considered a honorable place. To disparage it, is to disparage the state.

Treason.

Same as if they committed the crime itself, if they were knowingly aiding criminal activity without compulsion involved. Providing legal counsel is protected, as is providing aid unrelated to crime (such as medical aid or providing food).

Cool motive, still a crime. Depends mostly on whether or not people get hurt in the process, but either way, it's most likely going to net you jail time and reparative fines.

Depends. State and state-funded organizations do this all the time, in fact some of these organizations can be called cults- primarily because of their extremely hierarchical organization and interest in the occult. As long as the cult doesn't do anything illegal or dishonorable no one would probably care- I mean the Crown currently defines it's primary purpose as "UNLEASHING THE SECOND DAWN"- with no one knowing what the hell this "second dawn" is.
