No clue, probably? That or Munkchester, but then again Munk is better known for awful RP etiquette and deliberately starting flamewars or engaging with absolute garbage takes.

But this? This seems like something else entirely. Shame I never really got to see what Champaign was like, but eh, oh well. I'm probably better off not knowing.

Hi I'm Munk nice to meet you. "Champaign Socialist Sharifistan" is the person you're talking about, he's still around, not DOS, but it's nice that you're calling his stuff "thinly-veiled fetish threads" without this most basic knowledge. Anyway they're obviously not 'fetish threads' lol he's just imitating me. English city-state does slavery shit. Where have we heard that one before?

A classic bad RPer from a few years ago was Crazybloxian Empire. I think they're technically still around in the sense of 'they keep their nation alive' but they literally haven't posted on the forums since 2018.

But anyways, Crazybloxian Empire's whole thing was they'd declare war on/threaten to nuke basically any nation that refused to play with them, with healthy doses of godmodding and, you know, trying to involve people in RPs that they didn't consent to. It even happened to me when I rejected their application in my Gandoor Broadcasting Corporation storefront on Gandoor. They seriously responded to the rejection by saying that they were launching nukes at the Gandoor Broadcasting Corporation and were going to nuke Gandoor's capital immediately. Then when I called them out for that, they threatened to assassinate my nation's president if I didn't shut up.

As you might of figured out, they would also get mad whenever people called them out for trying to involve them in war RPs without their permission or just critiqued and criticized their poor RPing in general. I distinctly remember a mod telling them something along the lines of 'You want to make a closed news thread just for your nation? That's fine, but you don't get to complain when you try and involve other nations in your roleplaying and they don't want to be involved'

Also they had this weird obsession with some polar bear that died at a zoo in Singapore and honestly I'm only mentioning this because their first thread about the polar bear's death is kind of stupidly hilarious.

Something I've noticed that's probably been brought up before is people doing nations of certain cultures will almost always have them fall into the same archetype.

Slavic nations are always communist

Germanic nations are always monarchist or fascist

Islamic nations are always some Saudi clone caliphate (I say as I have an Islamic nation which does not fit this archetype)

Any other big ones I've missed?

Republic of Dayganistan

A secular, Tajik dominated state in Central Asia which has experienced 40 years of democratic backsliding. NS stats are NOT used.

Personally I've noted that if a nation is in Central America (rare) it's always going to be a corrupt democracy that's arguably closer to autocracy

Somewhat related but if your nation has a flag that has any colours or symbolism associated with left-wing politics, then you will always be thought of as either a Russian-speaking (or at the very least Eastern European) or Chinese-speaking state that is a one-party dictatorship with a centrally-planned command economy, no freedom whatsoever, and with either gulags or just 'reeducation through labour' for people opposed to the regime, even if literally everything else about your nation's lore (or even your NS stats) contradicts that assumption.

Yeah, I most fall under that, it seems like a big misconception that I'm a communist nation despite the fact that the nation is actually beginning to gradually remove socialist influences and that the main focus of my nation is the fact that we are more of a military junta than a dictatorship of the proletariat. Except that the military junta is actually led by the police. So... a police junta, I guess. Also, I'd consider the nation to be a little more right-wing. (To be fair, though, my nation is Eastern European and we are a one-party dictatorship, and my factbooks probably don't reflect that because I'm too bloody lazy to write stuff in my factbooks.) It is partially due to this misconception that I am planning on a flag change, perhaps apply a blue line to the Scottish flag (since my current flag resembles it already) or add some police-related imagery. Perhaps some rewrites of some of the details about my nation would do some good as well.

The funniest thing is I've occasionally had people in the 'Using ANs primary banner, how do they deal with traitors?' thread where people respond to me with 'gulags' or similar.

Like my primary banner is the trans flag, what the actual hell. I'm reasonably convinced that the people who say 'gulags' as their answer to my posts in that thread don't actually look at my primary banner and just immediately jump in with the 'omg socialist dictatorship = gulags' thing lol.

Whenever there's a major RL event happening, people always make threads in F&N asking about the RL event and your nation. This ranges from threads about current news events (like 'What was your nation's reaction to the Russian invasion of Ukraine?' or 'How did your nation deal with COVID-19?') to stuff like 'How does your nation celebrate Christmas?'

Occult nations spamming their sigils and demonic shit in their sigs or flags. Its a very niche thing but is a terrible cliché that pisses me off because certain symbols and sigils are like invitations to certain entities. I know it has to be a loose group of occultists and satanists doing it. They're always trying to psych ppl out. They tend to say things or roleplay as edgelordy as possible. Ugh.

I'd say it's summies but I'm more convinced it's just an annoying bitter revenge thing going on to try to bait mods into shutting down GE&T or banning them, for what purpose I don't know, but it's even more braindead than simply flaming/flambaiting for the sake of a reaction.
