Yes, and I happen to be quite fond of them.

They seemed like a band you would like, from what I've seen, so was curious.

I keep deciding if I'm going to listen to them or not. I tend to not be a huge fan of that style of music, but at the same time, something always interests me about them.

I'll probably use them as a way to get into death metal more.

How about Dir en Grey?

Monkey-The Dragon King

Yeah, extreme metal takes getting used to. As for Dir en Grey, never really liked them. A bit too goofy, too nu-metally, and to be honest I don't really like Japanese vocalists.

Immortal - Norden on Fire

All Shall Fall is an incredible album.

Burzum - "Tomhet"

Actually that just ended, now I'm listening to Burzum's "Hlidskjalf" album.

Immortal is pretty freaking awesome, I must admit. Favorite album by them is probably "Diabolical Fullmoon Mysticism", but "Battles In The North" is also pretty awesome.

Only thing by them I don't like is "Blizzard Beasts."

Yeah, I'm not a fan of a lot of Japanese vocalists. But I like Dir en Grey because the vocalists style is crazy.

Some of the weirdest Japanese vocalists are my favorite though. They seem to pull that off well.

But I like a lot of types of music, so goofy vocals might be easier for me to tolerate.

Sweet Trip-Conservation of Two

Apparently I'm clearing out all the bands with below 40 songs I have around.

There's songs and bands within extreme metal for anyone. Once a person begins to listen to too much extreme metal, they become desensitised to "normal" music. ☐
