Can you give me a few examples of what you consider 'experimental'?

Irepress-Pah No

remain in light by talking heads is experimental as it attempts to fuse african rhythms with contemporary music lizard by king crimson is experimental in its fusion of jazz music with classical in somniphobia is experimental in its juxtaposition of black metal and romantic era music as well as incorporating more typical rock into the genre

king of days, high on fire

Thanks. I will look at those. I can see your point, though I still consider 'some' of the Muse stuff 'experimental', even if not all of them are {obviously}. I mean, like I believe I mentioned earlier, they mixed symphonic and Dubstep (played on guitar, not on a computer or whatever). This current one I'm listening to is like, mellow pop or something with what sounds like electronic, though I can't be sure with Muse that they aren't just playing it still....like they did with the 'Dubstep' song. Then there's like, a random short guitar solo that makes me think of like, old-styled guitar solo's or something.

BUT I won't say they are entirely experimental, but they definitely have a variety. I can already tell their new album has a variety with 3 songs that sound completely different from each other.

Try this: the song Paper Planes sampled (heavily):

As for me:

Deep Purple - Soldier of Fortune

*When the war is over
