They face the same dilemma that the Chinese suffer, too many buildings in construction and not enough population growth or immigration to justify it. Thankfully, NATO is ready to help by 'making' refugees to fill it somewhat.

Life is heavily militarized; every sector of the populace possesses military training. The bleak life of citizens involves rising at sunup and training for future conflict until sundown. Society is Spartanesque, with their lances replaced by far more powerful weapons of much greater devastation. Those who refuse military service are damnatio memoriae, never to be seen nor heard of again.

Majority of population lives in multitude of small tightly-knit towns scattered over the distance. Life is slow, and calm.
