Alexandra of the United Kingdom

"Let's see.., Francisco Franco, but a US president!? Well, this is something. Anyhow, to begin with, this 'Franco' does certainly have a war record of his own to speak of. Now, in regards to politics, well.., it seems that he started as the deputy to the late JFK, a great and promising man indeed. Now, as much as I'd like to both compliment and also criticise his tenure as President, I have a rather funny feeling that Mr. Franco's acts as President are almost no different from that one President I read about once. Oh yes, Lyndon B. Johnson! All in all, I'd say that Mr. Franco does indeed bring some unique mix into American politics with his own character and so forth, although, as I said earlier, his tenure as President id not certainly an original one, and one that could be found in the life of the late LBJ himself"

Atkhal Daishind say, reading this document is very risky. The amount of skin exposed is proportional to the chances of me getting ran over by my wife's public transport vehicle of choice. Infact she might give up on running me over entirely and just jam my face against 700 volts of subway 3rd rail. With that I will have to tell Inogo to give you a proper response, me lady.

Inogo Estima: You remind me of San Horo. That bastard pumps out grand speeches like newspapers and both of you have the same degree but thats where the similarities end, fortunetely. You are a peace-loving, calm, content, but also strong person. Someone that the people can rely on for calmness. You seek cooperation between nations but this doesn't mean you bend over to pressure. Somewhat brave of you to give the finger to the crazy basta... I mean former president of the United Federation. Not that his successor is any better. Anyway, I think I should address the elephant in the room. Why is a socialist praising a monarch? Well, why not? You're not that kind of monarch and the people like you so I don't see the big deal. Don't worry I have spared you from San Horo's rantings. He's running away from angry mob.

"Under Inogo's regime, all guns laws are erased... Reminds me of my homeland! We have also erased gun laws after the revolution in 1982, since we decided, that no one should be ever able to take our freedom without a fight. Hell, our people got guns, and most communes have parking spots for their VTOLs and tanks. Anti-air guns on the roofs of some buildings too. We also have free speech reign, and copyright laws chopped to minimum. I say, Inogo would make a fine Sky Reaver and fit in among us perfectly. Almost... we are a lil' bit more... capitalist. Just a bit. But we still make sure, that workers have their rights, shorter work hours and nice pay.

His controversies? Our revolution wasn't very different... our revolution was even more violent and it took us all extreme will to keep our morals and honor in our darkest hour. I wasn't born at these times, so my parents told me. No wonder, the only logical outcome of Sky Reaver - Sherechia interactions was friendship and now we are willing to aid Sherechia in crisis and distress should it ever come to them." -Shawn Bjornson

Your revolution came about in the most unfortunate of circumstances. Clearly the collapse of the capitalist-imperialist world order proved rather chaotic. Though we may differ in terms of... ideology, your movement to unite the workers is admirable, in the face of despairing chaos.

An Official Statement made by the Grand Marshal Zhang Zuolin of the Fengtian Government of the Republic of China, the Old Marshal, the Benevolent Guide and Rightful Ruler of a united Republic of China

Zhang's Status: Recognize his country as a legitimate country please and thank you; he will throw any country into the trash bin of history should they recognize the Empire of China and not his country

"I recognize her ability as a commander and fighter, yes, but I also see she is a very unpleasant woman from what I have been seeing. She insults others; she likes to ridicule and sneer at strangers. Perhaps this attitude comes from the fact she has four children and no husband to love her. Perhaps. But still, that's no reason she should act like a Karen harbour such negative attitudes."

"Oh god, oh no... It's 'one of these', isn't it? sigh... I really hate doing these things but hey, fuck me I guess.

So, 'Marshal' Zlatka Broz, where do I even start with her? So for her whole early life she has been supposedly told how great it was to live under her granddaddy's regime? If I had to guess that's probably because the state police may or may not have been listening in the next room. So she must've thought that her grandfather's ideas must've been good and all that because apparently she read documents about it and whatnot. Although, for someone who apparently had such a high opinion of her grandfather, Zlatka never mentions him by name or described her personal experiences with him for some reason. After all, NOWHERE does it mention that her grandfather died before she was born.

Reading further into this, according to the factbook this Yugoslavia for some reason lost most of its so-called 'former glory' after this oh-so-great grandfather of Mrs. Broz over here passed away, leading into a downward spiral of rampant corruption due to incompetence and power vying in the leadership. Wow, it's almost like basing your entire system around a Cult of Personality around a single man is a dogshit idea. I'm honestly surprised Yugoslavia hadn't already collapsed at that point. In my world, the only reason Yugoslavia didn't fall apart as soon as Tito died was because he claimed that his soul would live on in the body of his successor.

Anyway... Wait a minute. So she joined the military for FINANCIAL SUPPORT OF HER FAMILY?!? Ex-fucking-cuse me?! Now, if Zlatka came from a working class family, I would understand and sympathize. BUT SHE IS LITERAL FUCKING GRANDDAUGHTER OF THE FORMER MARSHAL! DO YOU THINK I BELIEVE THAT HORSESHIT FOR EVEN A SECOND? This sounds more like a sad attempt at sympathy! Guess granddaddy wasn't that great after all if he didn't financially set up his family for life. No, I believe her reason for joining the military was to give a boost to her later political career. And this claim of mine seems to be supported by what's written about her military career. She also became an officer at an early part of her career already? I feel like there is something missing here you aren't telling us about, sweetheart. There is no way someone could legitimately become an officer that quickly. Hell, it took me five goddamn years, at which point I was halfway through my career, before I was promoted to lieutenant myself. And there is nothing here detailing any combat experience whatsoever, so I legit wonder what kind of [CENSORED]

So eventually Zlatka got into politics, supported by the legacy her grandfather conveniently left behind for her to make use of. Unfortunately for her the politicians who have probably been playing this game of power for a while now were sensing that she was a threat to their own positions in the government started harassing our poor little heroine. Now, picture this: you're a direct descendant of a powerful figure of a socialist dictatorship and all of your political opponents use all kinds of corrupt methods, including assassination attempts, in an attempt to get rid of you. Do you gather evidence and convict your opponents of corruption, with your family background as a way to somehow legitimize your claims? Well apparently fucking not, according to Zlatka, instead she chooses to stoop down to her opponent's level and BECOME CORRUPT HERSELF. I don't care if they did it first, the fact she gave in to utilizing the system's corruption herself, on top of using her grandfather's legacy for personal gain, makes her just as bad if not worse. So on a pile of bodies she eventually rose to the throne of Marshal, disposing of the so-called 'incompetent' Marshal at the time.

Fuck me, what else... Oh, so after she became Marshal herself, supported by her political dynastic claim, she implemented Titoism, arresting all the 'corrupt officials', and, get this, 'remembered her grandfather's IRON FISTED YET BENEVOLENT WAYS OF RULING THE NATION... DO I EVEN HAVE TO SAY WHAT IS WRONG WITH THAT VERY STATEMENT? HOW DO YOU EVEN- Weet je

"I've compared Lars' policies to the policies of Enthorea, our country during pre-regime times. Most of them are the policies we historically upheld during the cultural golden age. Except militarism part... During the golden age, we didn't pay attention to military, believing, that violence is beneath us, and problems should be solved diplomatically. We had only a token force back then. Now, in post-regime semi-anarchist society, we became more militaristic, believing, that only armed population combined with nice army will prevent totalitarianism from rising on our soil and destroying our culture ever again, so our policies are even more similar. Except conscription part, since we believe, that dragging people into military by force is counterproductive and against our ideals of freedom. Still, letting conscripts pick non-combat roles is a nice move, after all, war is hell, I've seen it, I've spilled lots of blood and I know, what I am talking about. It's not for everyone. Either way, Batavia is somewhat like us, but more orderly.

I also heard of his natural battle aptitude and skill, heard he is both a good shot and can crack some skulls in melee battle! And then he fought... islamists... Just like me. Difference, is that I had fought more than he did, cause after deployment, he was training new recruits. Yeah... That feeling, when ya' swing your warclub and it breaks terrorist's skull, when ya' shoot your LMG and it tears through the enemy squad. We also both showed leadership skills... We are different. I am warrior. He is a soldier. But we are similar. Perhaps, since he trained recruits, he could teach me some of the techniques, I might not know. While I could show him our own."-Shawn Bjornson
