Pestilence - Obsideo

Premier Dutch death metal.

And whats THAT good for?
Its not like anyone comments on it.

Um, yes we do, actually. Just not all the time. We've had plenty of conversations in this thread.

Heard this before, with people hopping into a thread they find meaningless just to talk about the meaninglessness of the thread...

I consider TET to be meaningless. Doesn't mean it doesn't deserve to stay here, or that I'm going to pop into the thread and ask "What's the point of this thread?"

btw this thread could be interesting for finding more music if people post a genre as well. like

"if i could change the world-Eric Clapton. classic rock/love song"

idk just random thought.

Hmm, I might actually do that.

Chelsea Wolfe-Deep Talks

To me, it sounds like very unsettling sounding noise rock.

Pestilence - Displaced

Merciless, technical and with subtle hints of fusion.

Pestilence - Distress

Funny thing is, I don't feel distress at all when listening to this track. Delightful fusion interludes in this advanced death metal gem.

I can't say I'll always do that, but might as well sometimes.

When listening to avant-garde bands, it was always fun for me to fling out the various different influences in the different songs, though.

From: The Bones of What You Believe

The genre is pretty much synthpop, though they sound heavily influenced by "Retro" stuff a lot of the time. Some electropop, too.
