I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

The growling is nothing compared to what black metal and deathcore have. ☐

Kylesa-Dust

Hmm, I was going to finish all of their albums, but after doing some other crap in real life and dealing with some crap, I'm not in the mood for this kind of metal for some reason.

I don't even know anymore. A year ago stuff like Fever Ray, Death Grips, and any form of rock would have been my answer, but now that's stuff I actually like. ☐

So I'm pretty much open to anything.

Except for country and gospel, those are genres I know with certainty I don't like. ☐

I used to feel the same way about metal genres. I rarely ever tolerated even instrumental metal for a while. Which was weird because I grew up on Mr. Bungle, Fantomas, Faith No More, ect, and loved it, but I guess I moved into a mellow music phase (Like Sigur Ros), and left my metal liking until I just went into who gives a shit what genre it is mode as long as it's good Fits into that style I've never found myself liking, but I think I like it better than the original Nightwish version. I guess I just have something against operatic vocals, I dunno. Though it always seems to be female ones....Because I don't mind the Kamelot singers singing at all really.

I feel the opposite way about symphonic and operative vocals. ☐
And yes, the MoonSun version is better than the Nightwish one.

But UnSun is far better than MoonSun.

This is one I truly love.
