Glad to see I'm not the only PT-FanT combo around.

Achsenland's monarch is a jack-of-all trades of sorts. She is proficient with three different weapons, including actual magic, is an Army Captain who can ride horses well, and well educated despite having weak legitimacy (though she heads a personal union between two nations as well)

AN: They have a wide selection of eccentric holidays, including one where they let loose a horde of turkeys and another that is celebrated a little over every two years with Las Palmeras.

Interestingly enough, Achsenland still seems to deploy pikes despite it being past 1815 in their world. Because the factbook describes the army as technologically advanced, I can assume these must be really cool pikes, then.

No I just didn't update it they stopped using pikes 50 years ago, they use bolt-action rifles now. I'm so sorry.

Oops. Alright, I'll exchange it with another fact, then, while I write my AN correction.

They use a form of "soft feudalism," which effectively just federalism.

Given their capital is in one of the nine regions (rather than an independent state) one can assert the nine Federated states of Pan-Asia are probably not equal in standing.

"nicknamed" lol as he is somewhat of a role model figure in Cesque History, and he was only called the Gay King after his death. Other nicknames of his include:

In their timeline, FDR's reforms were never put into place-- or maybe they were but Communist vigor was just more powerful. Either way, in 1936, the revolution sprung-up.

John of Ceyesca was the ruler of the country for 24 years. He saw the ending of the Napoleonic wars, oversaw the development of his country, was a people's king, and also openly (and famously, to an extent) gay.
