Not in itself a crime; any politician accepting a bribe however, will be sacked, stripped of all illegally obtained funds and then forced to consume an amount of croton oil equal in value to the bribe they took. Assuming they don't drown, they are then free to start their new career as a sewer flusher...

We do not have a law for such a travesty. Accidents happen. Just be more careful next time. ☐

But if there is a clearly labelled red button that reads, "Apocalypse Trigger. Do not press under any circumstance." Then it could be considered willful intent to destroy where humanity keeps its stuff. 1st offence is a slap on the wrist and petty fine, but the second time, the courts get serious and may give up to 5 years in rehab. 3rd time, is the last straw and exile to a place that former corrupt leaders tell us they do not want to go so we send them -- Tahiti.

Being the direct cause of starting a nuclear conflict between two other nations and then boasting about it on social media?

Impersonating/forging signatures on something?

For most cases the sentence would range from 5 to 10 years re-education depending on severity, although there are cases like with forging signatures of central committee or military leaders where the sentence is execution for treason

Rigging a school playground with cluster munitions and threatening to blow them up?

We don't have schools nor do we have playgrounds, so nothing.

Public drunkenness is treated the same regardless of day, and is treated as a civil offence - while there are records of people who have been caught publically drunk, they are kept private and are only accessed by the police when needed - depending on circumstances, most people on a first offence will be let off with a warning or a fine, with the level of fine and potential jail time increasing with the number of offences. That is just if the drunkenness had no other impacts. If the public drunkenness was a factor in another crime (e.g. assaulting someone while drunk), that person would be charged with assault and battery.

Recklessly but not intentionally using experimental technology in a way that led to another person's death. (I choose this because that is something that happens in Atrovania, given the pre-apocalypse technology that remains).

Last edited by Atrovania on Fri Oct 06, 2023 8:18 pm, edited 1 time in total.

The Republic of Atrovania is not a WA member state. There is more detail in Atrovania's Information & Disclaimers page on this topic, and other areas.

In terms of technology, most Atrovanian technology is modern technology (MT), often enhanced with elements of Post-Modern Technology (PMT). Atrovania has the knowledge to use PMT to enhance MT, but lacks the capabilities to built and maintain things which are entirely PMT for the next (likely) several decades, at a minimum.
